SPAIN.

The Budget—A Deficiency Last Year—A Surplus Hoped For—The Monarchy—The Ministry—Martial Law.

MADRID, Oct. 31.—Señor ARDANAZ, in his budget, just submitted to the Cortes, announces that the financial deficit for the current year amounts to 250,000,000 reals. He looks forward with hope to the ensuing fiscal year, extending from January, 1870, to January, 1871, his estimates for which show, as before reported, a surplus in favor of the Treasury.

The prospects of the election of the Duke of GENOA to the throne of Spain continue to improve. The number of Deputies in the Cortes known to be in his favor is increasing. Yesterday 110 members, among them the radicals, openly pronounced for him. But the majority of the people seem to be hostile to his election.

The merchants have presented a petition in favor of the Duke DE MONTPENSIER.

It is again reported that Ministers ARDANAZ and SILVELA have tendered their resignations.

The resignation of ISQUIERDO is officially announced.

In the Cortes, yesterday, General PRIM said the Government hoped to withdraw at an early day the decree establishing martial law, but that at present such a step could not be taken, because conspirators still remained at large, and the cases of several rebel leaders were pending before councils of war.

FRANCE.

The Emperor Rheumatic but not Ill—Ministerial Rumors—Fleury's Mission to Russia.

PARIS, Oct. 31.—Le Public (newspaper) says the report that the Emperor is suffering from a relapse of his former illness is false. On Friday the Emperor experienced some rheumatic pains, but on Saturday they had disappeared, and the Emperor was quite well.

No meeting of the Ministerial Council has been held at Compiègne since the Emperor's return.

Prince NAPOLEON had an interview with the Emperor yesterday. This event, coupled with the sudden arrival of EMILE OLLIVIER in Paris, has caused a revival of the rumors that Ministerial changes are contemplated.

It is given out that one of the special objects of General FLEURY's mission to St. Petersburg is to induce Russia to join the other great Powers in a general disarmament.

GREAT BRITAIN.

The Irish Land Question—The German Ship Weser.

LONDON, Oct. 30.—The Times, in an article on the Irish land question, says: "It is not our business to satisfy the Fenians. They would not be satisfied if Ireland was doubly confiscated for their benefit. It is our business to do justice between two classes constituting the bone and sinew of Ireland, whose interests are identical, and extirpate the most ancient root of Irish wrongs. Two opposite sources of error must be remembered. It would be wise not to meddle with the land question at all, unless we effectually quiet the present tenants. At the same time, it would be shortsighted to sacrifice the next generation. Ireland wants rest from agitation, but short-lived rest must not be purchased by concessions pregnant with anarchy. In closing accounts with the past, it may be just and necessary to recognize prescriptive rights of double origin, but it cannot be so to foster the growth of similar rights in the future."

The paper found in a bottle off the coast of Cornwall, reporting the loss of the German emigrant ship Weser, proves, on examination, to have been a hoax.

Lopez and the Allies—A Letter from the Secretary of the Argentine Legation at Washington.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 31.—The following has been furnished from the Legation of the Argentine Republic, in this city:

A report having been published in several of the leading journals of this country, in which the name and fame of General M. E. MCMAHON, the Minister of United States Minister to Paraguay, are involved in assure the American people that the atrocities of LOPEZ, the Paraguayan Dictator, not only do not exceed, but cannot even compare with those committed by the Generals commanding the Allied Armies operating against Paraguay, I have been authorized by the Minister Plenipotentiary and Envoy Extraordinary of the Argentine Republic to this country to protest against that scandalous calumny, covered, as it is, by anonymous publication, and offensive to the honor of the Argentine Army, of whose late and present Commander-in-Chief I am a close relative.

Secretary of the Argentine Legation.

CUBA.

The Insurrection—Railroad Operations—The Rebels—Discharge of the Privateersmen at Wilmington, N. C.

HAVANA, Oct. 30.—Intelligence from the Central Department is to the effect that a body of insurgents, while operating on the Cienfuegos and Villa Clara Railroad, obstructed the track in such a manner as to cause a freight train to be run off. They then carried away the freight into the interior, and burned a bridge, thus cutting off communication between the two cities.

The United States flagship Pawhatan, Admiral POON commanding, arrived at this port to-day.

WILMINGTON, N. C., Oct. 30.—All of the officers of the privateer Cuba were to-day discharged by the Commissioner, except DAVID A. TRENAIR, D. D. MUNROE, NICHOLAS ISLING, R. H. GIBSON, N. D. PHILLIPS, LEWIS FRENCH and JOHN LYNCH, who were required to give bail in the sum of $600 each for appearance before the United States District Court, which meets on Monday.

KOOPMANSCHAP has returned to this city. He will forward a hundred Chinamen next week to work on the Memphis and El Paso Railroad. He says there are 3,000 Chinamen in the State out of employment, and that more are returning to China at present than are coming here, owing to the approaching national holiday in the Empire.

SANDWICH ISLANDS.

The Labor Question—A Ship in a Cyclone—Pay of Sailors of Whalers—An Epidemic Fever.

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 31.—The steamer Idaho arrived to-day with Honolulu advices to Oct. 20.

The labor question is creating much excitement and numerous meetings have been held. The planters favor the importation of Chinese. The commercial and laboring classes urge the encouragement of European immigration. All agree that a fresh supply of labor is absolutely necessary for the agricultural interests of the country.

The ship Franklin Thayer, hence Aug. 27, with a cargo of wheat for Liverpool, encountered a cyclone Sept. 4, in longitude 124° west, latitude 29° 24' north, and sprung a leak. The cargo shifted and she was compelled to put into Honolulu, discharge her freight and repair damages. The cargo is in bad condition, and the stench from the steaming wheat sickened a portion of the crew and turned the inside of the vessel black as tar.

Rev. Father WALSH, an old resident, died on Oct. 14.

The United States Consul has fixed the rates of pay for sailors on the whaling fleet this Fall on the following basis: Sperm oil, 97 cents per gallon; Arctic, 83 cents per gallon; Coast, 49 cents per gallon; Arctic whalebone, 68 cents per pound; Ochotsk, 48 cents per pound; Kodiac, 63 cents per pound.

The American Minister entertained the King and his Ministers, the Consular Corps, and the Captain and officers of the French war steamer Magine, at a dinner at the American Club House.

An epidemic fever prevailed on the Island of East Maui, and deaths were numerous.

The population of the Honeenan Valley has dwindled down to two or three families.

A Snow Storm in Maine—Fire in Bucksport.

BANGOR, Me., Oct. 31.—The snow storm which began on Friday continued through Saturday. It has been very severe at Lincoln. Eighteen inches fell at Moosehead Lake and down in Piscataquis County one foot. The stages are leaving Dexter on runners. Some eight or ten inches fell here, but it has mostly melted. The weather is now clear and cold.

A fire at Bucksport this morning damaged the offices of the Town Treasurer and Selectmen, the book and stationery store of W. H. PILLSBURY, the boot and shoe store of S. C. TILES, and the shop of N. S. SILSBY. The aggregate loss is about $4,000, which is partially covered by insurance.

The Maine Senatorship—Appointment of Hon. Lot M. Morrill.

AUGUSTA, Me., Oct. 31.—Governor CHAMBERLAIN yesterday appointed Hon. LOT M. MORRILL United States Senator, to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Senator FESSENDEN. Mr. MORRILL has twice been elected to the Senate, and his appointment is regarded as eminently fit.

Shot Dead in Indiana.

A Sleeping Car on the Oswego and Syracuse Railroad Thrown from the Track by a Broken Rail—Several Persons Injured.

SYRACUSE, Oct. 30.—The morning train from this city, which left here, on the Oswego and Syracuse Railroad, at 6:20 this A. M., had attached to the rear end the sleeping car from New-York, and on reaching a point one and a half miles north of Fulton, while running at the usual rate of speed, the sleeping car left the track, and becoming detached from the train, went down the embankment, some twenty feet, turning over twice in its descent, and landing on its feet. The train was stopped as soon as possible, and the passengers hastened to the rescue of the inmates of the sleeping car. A few moments sufficed to extricate those in the car, and it was found that only three persons were severely injured, as follows: Conductor JOHN J. VAN WAGNEN, cut and bruised about the face, head and shoulders, and it is feared internally injured. A Mr. VAN DYKE, of Oswego, brother of Dr. VAN DYKE, of that city, was severely injured and cut about the head and face. The third person injured was a lady, residing in Oswego. She was severely bruised and injured about the head and shoulders. Several persons were slightly bruised by the rolling over of the car, but not seriously. Several Syracusans were on the car, but all escaped without injury. The stove in the sleeping car broke from its fastenings rolled over, spilling its contents on the bedding in the berths, and setting fire thereto, but the porter of the car succeeded in extinguishing the flames before much damage was done.

The unharmed passengers of the sleeping car, together with the injured, were transferred to other cars of the train, which started for Oswego. The accident was caused by a broken rail, a section some six feet in length having been found entirely separated from the balance of the rail. The sleeping car is badly damaged, and lies on its side in the ditch at the foot of the embankment. The morning train from Oswego for this city left on time. On arriving at the scene of the disaster, Conductor JOHN BERRIMAN superintended temporary repairs to the track, and the train was enabled to get past the broken rail, and reached this city only some twenty minutes behind time. A wrecking car was dispatched from Oswego shortly after the report of the accident was received, and it was thought probable no further detention to the trains would result from the accident.

THE SUB-TREASURY AT NEW-YORK.

An appointment of Sub-Treasurer for New-York will be made in a few days. The recommendation of the Secretary of the Treasury will be made to the President, and will probably control in the matter.

PETERSBURG, VA., IMPROVEMENTS.

The City of Petersburg, Va., has voted $250,000 in bonds to deepen the channel of the Appomattox River, from seven to fourteen feet, from City Point to the wharves of Petersburg, a distance of nine miles. Contractors stand ready to undertake the work when the bonds are negotiated. Colonel JAMES H. PLATT, member of Congress elect from that district, has gone to New-York to sell the bonds, and has taken with him facts and statistics showing that Petersburg is one of the most thoroughly reconstructed and prosperous cities in the South. Her resources are largely above her liabilities.

ECONOMY IN GOVERNMENT.

The facts and figures given in this correspondence within the past few days regarding the economies of the Administration are susceptible of further amplification in the details, showing by what means and processes this large reduction of the public expenditure is being accomplished. Take first the army. The expenditures for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1869, were in round numbers $90,000,000. The total appropriation for the current fiscal year was $94,799,606; the balance available from previous appropriations was $41,000,000; total available, $175,000,000. Now the army expenditures for the first quarter of the current fiscal year as compared with the same quarter in 1868 are as follows: Quarter ending Sept. 30, in 1868, $27,406,344 66; quarter ending Sept. 30, 1869, $15,142,202 50; reduction in 1869, $12,754,962 16. This is a reduction at the rate of $50,000,000 per annum in army expenditure alone. But, granting that the difference is greater in this quarter than in any to follow, the prospect is exceedingly favorable for bringing the War Department expenditure for the year inside of $80,000,000, effecting a total saving, as compared with 1868-69, of over $20,000,000. The chief features of this retrenchment are:

First—The reduction of the army by twenty regiments now in process, yielding favorable results in the reduction of expenses, at the present moment, but to be still more apparent hereafter, when the expense involved by the process is also abated by its completion. The saving from this source is at the rate of $20,000,000 per annum.

Second—Peace on the Plains, a result of the new and honest Indian policy, scarcely in operation long enough to be thoroughly felt, but already producing good results and saving many millions.

Third—The reduction, actually accomplished, of the list of civil employees of the army from 10,000 to 4,000. A still further reduction of this force to 2,500 is probable during the ensuing year. When the extra transportation attendant upon the consolidation of the army is concluded, and the reconstruction of the States complete, so as to obviate the wide distribution of troops in detached detachments, a further saving will be effected. Still other reductions, small in detail but large in the aggregate, are in contemplation, so that the confident hope of reducing the army expenditures down to $30,000,000 per annum, in the second year of GRANT's Administration, is abundantly warranted.

Fourth—The Navy Department is now using the unexpended balance of previous years, and has not yet touched its appropriation for the current fiscal year. The appropriation for 1868-9 was $17,000,000; that for 1869-70 was $15,784,146. The expenditures for the quarter ending Sept. 30, 1869, were $600,000 less than for the same period in 1868, while a large portion of the payments were of such a nature as to render the decrease in the next quarter much more apparent.

Fifth—The Post Office Department has just closed its accounts for the last fiscal year with a surplus of $1,650,000 out of the deficiency of $3,500,000 asked for by the late Postmaster-General, and granted by Congress last Winter. Among the features of reduction here is a large saving by the reorganization of the special mail service, and by the reduction of service on or by the discontinuance of unnecessary mail routes. The expense of the mail service has been reduced over $400,000. This Department will be rendered very nearly if not quite self-sustaining during the current year.

Sixth—The General Service. This includes all other Departments of the Government except Indians and Pensions, which are regulated by law, viz., the legislative, executive, judicial and diplomatic, including the payment of all salaries, the cost of collecting the revenue, both internal and customs. Among the elements of reduction in the civil service is the discharge of from five to six hundred clerks in the Treasury Department alone, thus involving a saving of $600,000 in the conduct of that Department. There is also a large reduction in the cost of collecting the internal revenue, equal to fifteen per cent. as compared with last year.

The prospect now is that there is no department, unless it be the Interior, which will not come within the limit of the appropriations made by Congress, including the balances available from last year.

THE PACIFIC RAILROADS.

The Special Commission on Pacific Railroads, which has been in session here during the past week, will lay its report before Secretary COX in the morning. The investigation made was of the most minute character, as is shown by the fact that all timbers of the bridges were measured, and the strain on all the iron rods of these structures estimated in the matter of ballast. Three of the Commission constantly took notes on the point on every mile of road. The report of the condition of the bridges over the whole line is of a very favorable character, and for ordinary traffic and present use all the bridges and trestles are regarded as safe. The great bridge over the American River and bottoms near Sacramento, needs some strengthening bolts, and in fact the Central Company was putting them in when the Commission returned. The trestle over the Devil's Gate, which was so trying to certain weak nerves last Summer, has been replaced by a substantial bridge of approved construction. The great Dale Creek Bridge, at Sherman, is commended in strong terms, as to subverts there was more than was needed, and quite a number will be filled up. The Companies, not knowing the amount of rainfall had made excessive allowance. Now that those really needed are known, timber is being replaced with stone, and good stone is also being put in abutments in place of the material there was when first the rail reached the place. The red stone found in Weber and Echo Canyons has proved of excellent quality. The ties were generally examined, and the cottonwood have been replaced by hard pine in many places, and four hundred thousand of the latter class are now on hand at Laramie, having been floated down the river from the Black Hills, ready to be put in place of the old ties. The rapid change of all the cottonwood for this red pine is recommended, and this pine is held to be as near the requirement of the letter of the law as the Company can come. The grades on both roads are within the limits of the law, only on the Sierra section of the Central do either the grades or curves reach the maximum allowed. On the Union Road there are no grades above ninety feet. In the matter of ballasting, as stated, figures were taken by three of the Commission on each mile. As a result, a large proportion of both roads were found to be well ballasted, and some of it is of the best possible character. Estimates are presented for replacing the cotton-wood ties and completing the balasting; also for widening the embankments, which were found to be needed at a number of points. As to equipment, the Commission agree that there is an abundance, and in fact an excess of this, in some particulars, as each road water stations are plenty. The Commission express opinion that the officers of both roads are working in good faith to bring the roads to the best possible condition as soon as possible. The figures fixed upon as the needed outlay to fully complete the road within the intent of the law cannot be ascertained. The last management of the Union Road does not receive favorable notice, but the present is regarded as conducting affairs in good faith. While the report, as a whole, is very favorable to the road, it is also very exacting in specifications of what needs yet to be done.

Notice is given by the Lighthouse Board that on and after the 10th of November, 1869, a light will be exhibited from, and marking the southern end North Brother Island, in the East River, between Long Island Sound and the harbor of New-York. The building is of wood, one story high, with Mansard roof, from which rises a wooden tower, supporting the illuminating apparatus, consisting of lens of the sixth order, showing a fixed white light at an elevation of fifty feet above the level of the sea, and illuminating 360° of the horizon. The building is painted light drab, except the trimmings, which are brown.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

I was on board the train on my way from New-York to Binghamton, on the 26th ult., when the cars were thrown off the track with great violence. The train was running with fearful speed down the steep grade approaching the Susquehanna Depot. In consequence of thus running so steep a grade, on a curve, and at a dangerous position, a rail was crushed and a wheel broken. The track was not sufficiently secure to sustain the pressure, and the iron in the rail was said to have been poor. The passenger cars fortunately uncoupled, and the speed was checked just before making a fatal plunge over the precipice into the Susquehanna River. The palace car, being in the rear, was saved by striking a rock when it was on the very brink of the precipice.

Now, who is to blame for running this train down a steep grade, at a dangerous point, with a speed of about fifty miles an hour? I aver that the blame rests in the first place with the managing directors for establishing a time table which requires conductors and engineers to run such hazards with impunity; in the second place with the engineer—no engineer, even if his train should be behind time, should presume to run it at a dangerous speed, on a steep grade and a curve, and hazard the lives of passengers. That there was some great wrong somewhere, no intelligent passenger doubted.

It is a fact that because of the dangerous rate of speed which the lightning express on the Erie Railroad is required to make, sanctionably between Susquehanna Depot and Orange County, every passenger travels over the road at the risk of his life. Let the Legislature apply the remedy. A PASSENGER.

BINGHAMTON, Oct. 28, 1869.

From the New-Orleans Picayune, Oct. 26.

This distinguished gentleman [Mr. JEFFERSON DAVIS] arrived on the steamship Cuba last night, as was announced in our morning edition, but with other passengers, in accordance with a barbarous regulation which late oppressions have brought into existence here, just as they are being abolished, or, at least, modified by the most tyrannical of Governments, was not permitted to land until this morning. He is accompanied by his brother, Mr. JOSEPH E. DAVIS, and his niece, Miss E. MITCHELL. They are staying with his niece, Mrs. STAMPS, on Carondelet-street.

It will gratify the hearts of our Southern people to learn that, notwithstanding the reports we have had from abroad that the health of Mr. JEFFERSON DAVIS was bad, and declining, that he has come back among us looking and feeling better than at any time since the war. So fresh and vigorous is he that he looks as if there had not been a war that had ended in disaster to him and his; and he seems as able to manage and put through any great enterprise as he was ten years ago.

He remains here only two or three days, going hence to Bayou Sara, and thence to Mississippi, but he may return to us afterward. We hope he may be induced to do so.

Arrival of the Steamship City of Paris.

The steamship City of Paris, from Liverpool Oct. 21, and Queenstown Oct. 22, arrived at this port at 2 o'clock this morning.

THE MISSISSIPPI HORROR.

From the St. Louis papers of Friday morning.

It is seldom indeed that journalists have to record such a shocking catastrophe as that which startled the public yesterday, and which will send a thrill of horror through the whole land. A steamer, the Stonewall, plying between St. Louis and New-Orleans, caught fire while it had a living freight of some 275 persons on board, of whom, it is feared, comparatively few have escaped an untimely death. The remembrance of the disaster which occurred on the Ohio last January, through the colliding of the steamboats United States and America, and the attendant loss by fire and drowning, is yet fresh in the popular mind. Then nearly every person on the two boats was lost. Some bodies were recovered in a terribly mutilated and charred condition, while others known to have been on board have never been heard of since. The disaster we have to chronicle is somewhat similar to that one—though less lives were destroyed by fire and more persons came to their death by drowning. The point where it occurred was near Neeley's Landing, on the Mississippi River, about 120 miles below St. Louis and 15 above Cape Girardeau.

DEPARTURE OF THE BOAT.

The Stonewall, THOMAS SCOTT Captain, left the wharf near the foot of Elm-street, at 6 o'clock on Tuesday evening, with all her passengers on board, and steamed over to the East St. Louis Elevator, where it received a large quantity of freight. It started on the trip which was to prove so disastrous at 3 o'clock on Wednesday morning.

THE HUMAN FREIGHT.

As near as can now be estimated, there were aboard of the boat the following persons:

Cabin passengers	36
Deck passengers	166
Officers	17
Deck crew	36
Cabin crew	20
Total	275

Among the cabin passengers were Mrs. GREGG, whose husband is supposed to be the mate on the Stonewall; Miss CARRE; four children, names unknown; Captain JOHN W. DOTY, of New-Orleans, a steamboat man interested in the New-Orleans and Red River trade, who had been in St. Louis nearly a week on business; Mr. BERRIMAN, DAVID SCHULTZ and R. A. PERKINS, a planter from Shreveport, La. There were, it is believed, only about three ladies among the cabin passengers, and about eight among the deck passengers. There were twelve children with the latter. In the deck crew there were twenty roustabouts, twenty-two and eight firemen. The deck passengers consisted, in great part, of Irish laborers, who were going to work on Southern railroads. There were a number of Germans, and some Dagos or French peddlers.

CARGO.

As cargo the Stonewall had when it left St. Louis about 5,000 barrels of flour, 500 sacks of oats, about 150 bales of hay, and a large quantity of bacon and pork. There was also some petroleum on board. There was 900 or 1,000 tons of freight. The boat was not freighted to its full capacity. There were about 150 mules on it.

THE TRIP DOWN.

On the trip down the boat stopped at Chester, where 800 barrels of flour were received on board. It reached this point at between 9 and 10 o'clock on Wednesday morning, and started after an little delay as possible. At Grand Tower 300 or 1,000 bushels of coal were taken on. No passengers were received on board at either place. The boat reached Neeley's Landing at 6:15 o'clock on Wednesday evening.

THE DISASTER.

At this time the warning cry of "fire" was given by one of the deck passengers, who ran to the engine-room and shouted to GEORGE W. FULTON, the first engineer, who was then on duty. Darkness had set in and the alarm came with a terrible significance. Here the boat was at a point where the river is one and a half miles wide, with much that was combustible on board, and with no means of escape when caught by obstinacy by running the vessel against the bank. The alarm was given immediately upon the origin of the fire, and it was not unheeded. FULTON rushed out and saw a bale of hay in the aft portion of the boat burning. So small was the fire that it could have been extinguished with one or two buckets of water if they had been at hand, but these were not there.

THE SCENE.

It begeres description; words fail—imagination is at fault. Two hundred and eighty souls ushered into eternity. A blazing fire behind them, and a death amid icy waters before them. It was about 6:30 in the evening. In the cabin the supper table was thronged. Some had left and were smoking their evening cigars—others chatting near the stoves. Not very cold, for the night was dark and the air chilly and piercing. Down on the deck a motley crowd of a hundred and fifty emigrants and working people were gathered. Many had eaten their supper; others were taking their last mouthful, when a small blaze not larger than your hand broke out on a bale of hay, and a soldiery deck hand ran forward and cried, "Fire! fire!" From mouth to mouth the soul-starring cry ran, and in a moment the deck passengers were palsied with fright and desperate with excitement. Hardly heard in the cabin, the first cry was regarded as a ruse—perhaps a rude among the deck passengers. Some were a little full of liquor—then in a second twinkling, came the second cry—a yell—a maddening, deafening yell of "Fire! fire! fire!" that pierced the deck and rang through the ears of the supper eaters like a death knell. Now, there could be no mistake. It was no frolicsome ruse. That cry meant life or death, and every one felt it. To the upper deck, to the cabins afore and aft, people rad. Panic, fear and frenzy ruled the hour. There were seventy-five life-preservers in the staterooms, but only one man secured one. There was a yawl, but some of the deck passengers seized it, and, without ceremony, indiscriminately piled in and paddled ashore with their hands. From the small blaze on the hay near the boiler deck, the fire spread to the coal oil, and the whole ship was in a blaze. The boat was loaded with bacon and other edibles, and the flames spreading with fearful rapidity soon found the solid combustibles, and an intense heat was generated.

ON DECK

the scene was most fearful. One hundred and fifty passengers, mostly foreigners—Irish, Italians, Dagos, Germans and Americans—some with their wives and families, all in confusion grand, trying to save their lives. The boat grounded two hundred yards from the shore; the passengers commenced jumped and worked in vain. The passengers were rampant and wild. Efforts were made to adjust the hose to the donkey engine, but the crowd would not allow it. Some tried to throw out planks and stagings, but the crowd rushed to the edge of the deck, and, in their eagerness to secure positions, prevented the stagings from being put out. All shouted, "Get off the staging!" and the man who cried the loudest was the very man who was in the middle of the staging. The poor deck passengers knew not what to do. Peddlers with their packs, like the miser at Herculaneum, clung to their last worldly remnants, and found a watery or was a fiery grave beside their filthy pelf. Irishmen, with their picks and shovels, going to work Southern roads, their old clay pipes half filled with tobacco, and their all done up in a red bandanna, were there; and dark-faced Italians going to the sunny south to expose their wares in a money-making mart; Dagos, French emigrants going where their own language was spoken, were there. These people were the first to see the fire—the first to catch the fright—the most uncontrollable—the most lacking in judgment, and consequently the most severely suffering. They rushed to the edge of the vessel and seeing the flames that illumined the heavens and glistened on the dark waters—feeling the heat that scorched and burned—hearing the explosion that thundered from the engine room and machinery department—and dumbfounded and frightened by the noise and confusion, as well as blinded by the smoke, they plunged pellmell into the waters. Some clung to spars and bits of wood, but found nothing to hold, swam or floated for a short time, and then, benumbed by the icy chillness of the waves, and blinded by the darkness, sank to watery graves. Many mules and horses were on board, and with the deck passengers, and—poor dumb creatures, who could expect them to display more reason than human beings?—they rushed with the people and jumped into the water with the boat, and, with the exception of a few, few started and swam ashore, but most of them swam around the boat in circles, drowning men women and helpless children. One mule jumped into a crowd of people struggling in the water, and by his frantic movements drowned six people.

IN THE CABIN.

Before the news reached the cabin, the deck passengers were wild with excitement. The first cry was hardly uttered, but the second, carried too much excitement in the minds of its notes to be mistaken. Men, women and children, rushed out, some to grab life preservers, and others all and on deck. The cabin was filled with smoke, a blinding, choking smoke, a smoke that would not be checked, but was the forerunner of more deathly flashes. There were only three lady passengers in the cabin, one helpless old lady, a mother with two young children, one a baby still in swaddling clothes, and the third lady a wife going to meet her husband, from whom she had long been separated, in Louisiana. Could on the boat's edge, what were the cabin passengers to do? They were only about forty in number, but their plight was one of peril. All around them the lurid flames; beneath them the dark waters, welcoming them to anything but hospitable graves. Just under, the frantic deck passengers the maddened animals rushing to and fro, uncontrolled, uncontrollable—all shrieking, shouting, praying and imploring for life and safety. To jump the distance was fearful, and the leap was certain to be to leap to the grave; to remain was death by burning. Every one was frantic; officers tried in vain to keep the crowd quiet, but the danger was too imminent—the death too certain. The little children clung in vain to the arms of their mothers; the ladies shrieked and fainted too late; the men rushed to and fro, and selfish instinct prevailed, and every one shifted for himself as best he or she could. Had people kept cooler, more would have been saved; but the blind instinct or infatuation of a mob to follow leaders ruled, and the example of the deck passengers was followed by the cabin passengers above. The flames were approaching them, and when so many were jumping into the water, why should not all? Alas, the water was chilly and cold, and the bar was only a slight one and a strong current ran on either side. Many jumped, struck bottom and had their feet carried from under them by the swift and treacherous undercurrents; others blind with frenzy and excitement, rushed to where the crowd was thickest, and jumped in among the mules struggling and kicking, and among the stout and hearty laboring men, whose presence of mind had left them, and whose only thought seemed to be that safety was only secured by all jumping together in one vast grand heap, on top, in between, and among each other. Thus a sure death was secured. With everybody the question was "touch and go," impulse got the better of judgment, and reason and common sense, that would have rushed for life preservers and taken doors off from hinges, took a back seat. Men lost hope, and infatuation seized every one. The fire was by no means a lingering or a lazy one; the flames neither tarried nor lingered, but spread from bale to bale, from hogshead to hogshead, from huge piles of hay to slumbering sacks of oats, from combustible and easily-excited coal oil to solid and juicy bacon, from cold and inanimate provisions to human life, that a moment before was buoyant with hope and brimful of expectation. The flames rolled and crept and licked their way along, now stealthily, now rushingly, now with smoke and snap of spark and cinder, and anon bursting forth in lurid fierceness. Many were burned and scalded, and not a few never reached the deck to make even trifling efforts for safety. Over the side of the boat the lambent flames ran, down near the engine, over the wheel, over the texas, and away up round the blackened smoke stack. The intense heat burst the pipe, and the explosion only added to the consternation.

THE ATTEMPT TO ESCAPE.

While the deck passengers and crew were huddled together on the forecastle, E. P. WATSON, the carpenter of the boat, endeavored to get some of them to assist him in putting the stage plank overboard. It would have floated, it was believed 100 persons to the land, but the passengers were struck helpless by the prospect of the horrible fate staring them in the face, and failed to launch the plank. Fifteen feet of it was pushed over the side. About twenty persons got on it, some were pushed off, and about sixteen managed to cling to it until they were taken off in a skiff which was sent from shore by Mr. FULTON. Fulton, the engineer, stayed at his post until he was driven from it by the flames, and jumped overboard. He started to swim toward the land, but found the mules so numerous in the water that he could make no progress, and so turned into the wheelhouse. He clung here in fancied security until the lines holding the levers burned off and the wheel commenced to revolve. It made three revolutions, and he was caught by it and considerably bruised. FULTON was in the wheel when a steam pipe, seven inches in diameter, connecting the engines with the boilers, burst and stopped the engines. This quickened the destruction of the boat, and the escape of steam and the terrific shock, placed those clinging to the stage plank in greater danger, although certainly they had but little hope.

ONLY ONE SKIFF.

There was only one skiff available to take passengers from the burning wreck. It made several trips from the boat to the land. Besides being the means of escape for those on the stage plank, it was needful to take FULTON from his perilous position. He was the last to quit it away; after that no one escaped from the boat. It was feared that some, hemmed in by the flames, were burned to death, and rumor had it that some met with such a dreadful fate in the cabin. How many, will never be known. It can only be hoped that they all succeeded in jumping into the river and got to shore. The coal oil—fortunately not a large quantity—and the bacon burned very fiercely. The Stonewall was burned to the water's edge in about one hour and a half after the fire was discovered. But long before this there was no living soul in it. The scene was a terrible one, one never to be forgotten by the survivors. The lamentations, groans and shrieks of dying men and women mingled with the noise of the cracking timbers, and to intensify the horror of the moment burning spars, fenders and beams fell over into the water where nearly 200 human beings were trying to save themselves from the jaws of death.

POWERLESS TO HELP.

There were numbers of people on the shore who had flocked from the houses in the neighborhood of the land

TEXAS.

Address of the Chairman of the Democratic Central Executive Committee to the Democracy of the State.

COMMITTEE ROOMS, CENTRAL EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE DEMOCRATIC PARTY, AUSTIN, TEXAS, Oct. 15, 1869.

An election is in Texas, under the Reconstruction acts of Congress, has been ordered on the 29th of November next.

After mature deliberation, the Committee have concluded that a State Convention is unnecessary at this time, and if held in the peculiar attitude of our political affairs would be productive of evil rather than good. In this conclusion they are sustained by the most prominent and trustworthy men throughout the State, the voice of the Press, and the general sentiment of the people. But in announcing this determination, the Committee deem it proper to offer some suggestions to the party they represent, to the end that there may be a understanding, that all may act together, and thus accomplish results of vital importance to Texas, both in the present and future.

First—The Constitution now submitted for adoption or rejection contains many repugnant features, but in case we reject it is there a reasonable prospect that one less objectionable will be offered for our acceptance? We think not. The power to regulate the question of suffrage has passed from our hands for the present by Federal legislation, sustained by the confirmatory action of the Northern people. Whether we approve it or not negro suffrage has been fixed upon us beyond our power of removal, and, therefore, reconstruction should not, on this account, be retarded. The acceptance or rejection of the Constitution is an issue above all party considerations. Party is powerless to meet the difficulties of a time like this. The intelligence and patriotism of the State should unite and act for the common good. The question is one each voter has to decide for himself, under his conviction of what is best for the public interest, but the Committee do not hesitate to advise the people of Texas, all things considered, to vote for the proffered Constitution, trusting to amendments hereafter to remedy defects.

Second—It is manifest that Congress has determined that Texas shall be reconstructed under the policy of reconstruction. Believing this, we are convinced that it is unwise and hazardous for the Democratic Party to run any candidate for the office of Governor.

Third—The extreme Radicals of Texas, though now professing to stand on the same platform with the more moderate Republicans, have been heretofore exceedingly intolerant, and endeavored in the Convention, as well as in Washington, to secure the disfranchisement of a large number of our citizens. We therefore look upon their success as one of the direst calamities which could fall upon the State, and to be avoided by all honest means within our power.

Fourth—If the proposed Constitution should be ratified by the people, there will be devolved on the first Legislature that meets under its provisions the duty of making various and important changes in the laws of the State, and especially to regulate the subject of taxation, now of serious moment to all people who own property, and check the many fraudulent and ruinous schemes inaugurated by the Convention, which, if carried out by legislation, would be disastrous to the financial interests of the State—we would therefore earnestly impress upon our fellow-citizens the necessity of selecting the most prudent, wise and reliable men for members of the two Houses of the Legislature; nor should it be forgotten, in this connection, that, under the provisions of this Constitution, the Judges, Supreme and District, besides other important appointments are made by the Governor and confirmed by the Senate. The question of paramount interest to the people of the State is that of an upright and able judiciary. We therefore urge upon our fellow-citizens to take an active part in the selection of members of the Legislature and all local officers, and see that honest and capable men are elected. We cannot be too earnest in urging our friends throughout the State to make a united effort in their different localities to cast a concentrated vote on one man for each legislative position. Plurality elections will bring us defeat, and elect extremists who hate our people and would ruin the State had they power. If District and County Conventions are necessary to effect a concentration, then we unhesitatingly recommend that such Conventions be held.

Fifth—By the law, none but registered voters are eligible to State, district or county offices, hence the propriety of our friends selecting as candidates none but such as can qualify if elected.

Sixth—We understand that new Boards of Registration will be organized prior to the election, and we advise all our friends who are entitled to register, and have not registered, to do so, and we impress it as a patriotic duty upon all to make an effort to have a full registration and a full vote. Many persons have heretofore been improperly rejected; such should apply again, and, in case of rejection, see that their cases are properly reviewed and properly submitted at military headquarters for revision.

Seventh—Whatever differences of opinion may have existed among us, as to the course most prudent to pursue in this crisis of our affairs, the Committee believe that recent events in Virginia, Tennessee and Mississippi leave us no alternative but to follow their example. Texas cannot stand alone. She ought not, by her action, to separate herself from her suffering sisters, all of whom are involved in a common fate. The leading statesmen of the South are in favor of a course of moderation and conciliation, and their judgment should have weight in our determinations.

Eighth—With regard to the late action of the Editorial Conference at Brenham, we believe the parties concerned suffered their prejudices to overcome their discretion, and that, in their zeal for Democracy, they lost sight of the real situation and difficulties which surrounded us. If the course which they recommend be followed, it can only result in a continuance of military rule, so hurtful and repugnant to all our people. We believe the conference to have been ill-advised, unauthorized, and in opposition to the wishes of a large majority of the Democratic Party of Texas. As such its action is entitled to no consideration, and should be promptly repudiated.

In conclusion, we submit our conviction that is no period of their lives have the people of Texas been called upon for action so deliberate and free from passion and prejudice as in the present. A false step, whether it proceeds from too keen a memory of the past or from lethargy and indifference, may entail the most disastrous consequences. Let every man, then, conscientiously perform his whole duty, discarding that spirit of bitterness which has heretofore too much characterized all parties, cultivating a more friendly feeling one for another, and forgetting the differences of the past, which arose from secession and were determined by the sword. Thus shall we be enabled to restore our State to the Union, establish peace and order throughout her borders, and advance the prosperity and happiness of all. W. M. WALTON, Chairman.

Destructive Fire in Canal-street—A Woman Seriously Injured.

About 3 o'clock yesterday morning a fire broke out in some rubbish under the stairs on the outside of the buildings Nos. 82 and 84 Canal-street, on the rear. No. 82, a small two-story frame, occupied by CAROLINE DIEKS, was damaged about $200, but was insured for $1,500 in the Star Insurance Company. The building, together with No. 84, also a two-story frame, which was totally destroyed, belonged to the Beekman estate. No. 86 Eldridge-street was occupied by Mrs. NORTS, whose loss was $2,500, and insurance $6,000. The house is owned by JOHN JOHNSON, and was damaged $2,000. All of these houses were occupied as houses of prostitution, and LIZZIE MCDONALD, one of the inmates of No. 82 Canal-street, was forced to escape by jumping from the second story window, which resulted in her receiving a severe injury to the back. She was removed to Bellevue Hospital. The fire is supposed to have been the work of an incendiary and Fire Marshal BRESLIN is engaged in an investigation of the affair.

Funeral of Mr. Paul Spofford.

The funeral of our lamented fellow-citizen, Mr. PAUL SPOFFORD, took place at his late residence, No. 4 East Fourteenth-street, yesterday, at 1 o'clock P. M., in the presence of a numerous assemblage of relatives and friends. The exercises were opened by some remarks by the pastor of the family, Rev. Dr. MURRAY, and the singing of the Hallelujah hymn, "Nearer, my God, to Thee." Appropriate lessons of Scripture were read by Rev. Dr. SHEDD, and the instructive lesson of the occasion was enforced in a brief address by Rev. Dr. ADAMS. Rev. Mr. NIXON, the pastor of the deceased when living at his Summer residence, paid a touching tribute to the purity of his life and the usefulness and beauty of his character. The ceremonies were closed with the hymn beginning, "Jesus, lover of my soul," and prayer and benediction by Rev. Dr. MURRAY. The solemn cortège of mourners, headed by the widow and family of the deceased, then made its way around by Green-Wood Cemetery, where the remains were laid in the family vault with becoming solemnities. The following gentlemen acted as pall-bearers: Hon. R. M. Blatchford, Jonathan Thorne, Sheppard Knapp, L. A. Dowley, Thomas A. Fails, John D. Wolf, R. T. Stuart, Jonathan Sturges, John D. Jones and Wm. H. Evarts.

Crimes and Casualties.

JOHN LEONARD, of No. 7 Hubert-street, was found yesterday morning in Church-street, near Worth, with his leg broken, and was taken to Bellevue Hospital. The Police do not appear to know how the injury was received.

About 4 o'clock yesterday morning an attempt was made to fire the dwellings Nos. 39 Hamilton-street by building a fire under the stairs, but it was fortunately discovered and extinguished before any damage was done.

Another occurred in Roosevelt-street, yesterday morning, between MATTHEW RYAN, of No. 107 Water-street, and JOSEPH LORENZ, a sailor, during which the latter was stabbed three times in the leg, but none of the wounds were of a dangerous character. RYAN was arrested, and being arraigned before Justice DOWLING, at the Tombs, was committed for examination.

The horses of Mr. MYNES, who resides in Fifth-street, near Avenue O, ran away yesterday while he was out riding, and at the corner of Eighty-fourth-street and Third-avenue he was thrown out and seriously injured about the head.

ANNA MORAN was arraigned yesterday before Justice DOWLING on a charge of stealing $41 from JOSEPH V. BURLOW, No. 13 Centre-street, who met her in the street, and had the money stolen while talking with her. She was committed for trial.

DAVID M. VAN PELT, of Port Richmond, Staten Island, encountered one MICHAEL O'NEILL, on the Battery, and, being assaulted by him, had his watch stolen from his pocket. O'NEILL was arrested and committed by Justice DOWLING for trial.

IMPORTANT TO LITIGANTS.

The Law Courts for November—No Supreme Court Circuit.

The regular monthly terms of the law courts commence to-day—the first Monday—though it is not expected that much will be done until after the election of Tuesday. Presiding Justices CLERKE, and Judges SUTHERLAND and CARDOZO of the Supreme Court, are announced to hold the General Term. On this calendar there are about 500 cases, ninety-two of which are non-enumerated motions, thirty preferred causes, and 421 which are classed among the enumerated motions. The number of appellate cases in this Court, as all who take any interest in the matter know well, is constantly increasing. Some relief to litigants ought to be had speedily.

This year we have five Judges of the Supreme Court in this Judicial District. Three of them must this month sit at General Term, one at Chambers, (Judge INGRAHAM,) and inasmuch as Judge BARNARD, the fifth wheel in the judicial coach, has announced his intention of continuing his Special Term steadily on through the month of November, there is no probability that there will be any Circuit. The October Oyer and Terminer and Circuit, held by Judge INGRAHAM, has been adjourned to Thursday next, at which time it is expected that one of the two Grand Juries now in session will make their report, and receive their proper discharge from the Court.

The number of causes on the Circuit calendar is nearly 3,000, and rapidly increasing. It was intended under and by virtue of the Judiciary act, that for at least four months in the year there should be three Circuits, and never less than two in constant session. For years we have not known what it is to be without Circuits. Parts I. and II., every month in the year, except during the ordinary Summer vacation. When litigants and members of the Bar come to understand that there is no Circuit at all in this City for a whole month, it will doubtless lead them to inquire the reason why. The reason can be stated in a few words, the simplest first.

The New-York Court House, which was commenced nine years ago, at least, and which has cost this City more than $12,000,000, has no room for a Third Circuit, although the law says we shall have one. The Court House has no room in which to hold the Second Circuit during those months when a General Term of the Supreme Court is held, which is a fact for the taxpayers of New-York to consider. There is room in abundance for private apartments and private offices; for the offices of the Comptroller, the Board of Supervisors; for the public and private rooms of the Surrogate, County Clerk and Sheriff, and yet, strange to say, there is no place in that great marble building, termed the New-Court House, for a Second Circuit Court, when it becomes necessary for the General Term to use the room appropriated to it. If the private rooms of Judges and other officials—all splendidly fitted up—did not occupy so much space in that large building, there would be room where suitors, whose cases have been pending for years, could get their causes tried. Two hundred jurors have been summoned by the Sheriff for this Circuit, for which he has paid of course, when it must have been well known at the time of issuing the notices that there would be no November Circuit.

The next and only reason that can be reached why there will be no November Circuit is, there will be no Judge to hold it, unless one is brought from another district. This will not be done, because the majority of the Supreme Court Judges of this City have determined, for reasons best known to themselves, that no Judge outside of this City shall hold Court here.

Tournament of the Brooklyn Chess Club.

A handicap tournament, confined exclusively to members, has been in course of play at the Brooklyn Chess Club since Saturday, the 23d inst. The players being divided into three classes, the first class gives the advantage of pawn and move to the second class and the knight to the third class, while the players of the second class give the odds of pawn and move to the third class. The number of entries embraces sixteen players, and the result of play up to the present time would indicate that the single prize to be awarded must almost inevitably fall to the lot of Mr. BRUENEN, the blindfold player, with Messrs FERRIS, MERRIAM and CHADWICK tolerably well placed.

CONSULTATION MATCH—WILLIAMSBURG VS. BROOKLYN.

A delegation from the Williamsburg chess clubs will visit that of Brooklyn, on Wednesday evening next, for the purpose of contesting a game by consultation.

FIFTH TOURNAMENT OF THE EUREKA CHESS ROOMS.

Arrangements have just been completed for the commencement of a tournament at the above rooms, Nos. 13 and 14 Division-street, on a scale more gigantic than those preceding it. The players will be divided into five separate classes, the odds given by the first class ranging as follows: To the second class, pawn and move; the third, pawn and two moves, or the "exchange" (rook for knight) to the fourth class, the knight; and the fifth class, the rook. Nearly all the leading players of New-York and its vicinity are expected to take part in this tourney.

Ten men, arrested on Friday for intoxication, were released on Saturday by Justice DOWLING, in order that they might exercise the rights of voters, and register if necessary. The fortunate prisoners were no doubt glad to secure their liberty so easily. There was no necessity to ask their politics.

MONDAY, Nov. 1—A. M.

The Trade of the week past was not so active as on our previous review. The business in General Foreign Merchandise, as well as in Dry Goods, begins to reflect the advanced stage of what is usually known as the Fall Trade, although it keeps well up with last year. Measured by the Customs duties paid into the Treasury, the business in Imports for October amounted, at New-York, to nearly two millions more than in October, 1868, but this excess barely covers the falling off at the close of September in consequence of the Gold speculation, and the troubles to general trade growing out of it. In the line of Exports, the movement continues to run ahead of last season, although the prices of Agricultural Produce, especially Wheat, are not so satisfactory. The Cotton trade has improved at Liverpool, and there is, consequently, a firmer tone to the market here. On both sides the consideration of the extent of crop, whether 3,000,000 or 2,750,000 bales, is apparently absorbed by the earnest demand from the Manchester trade to lay in an early stock of American descriptions at the going liberal figures.

The Foreign Exchanges are sensibly feeling the influence of the Cotton export, and last week there was also a supply of Short-sight Bills on London and the Continent made against United States 5-20s. The rate on London closed a shade firmer on Saturday, owing to a partial upward reaction in Gold from 128¾ to 129¾ ₱ cent. The Gold market, for most of the week, was quite heavy, the supplies from the Treasury being nearly ten millions of dollars, including sales of three millions, and interest payments over six and a half millions, as against less than two and a half millions taken in for Customs. About half a million of English Gold (£100,000 sterling) was returned to London on Wednesday.

The Money market ruled very cheap to the Brokers, on call loan, 6 ₱ cent. being the rule at the close of the week, with numerous exceptions on pledge of the Public Funds, at 5 ₱ cent.; but notwithstanding this apparent ease, the funds were made to sympathize with the weakness in Gold, until 115¾ ₱ cent. was touched for the 5-20s of 1867. From this depression there was a recovery to 116¼ ₱ cent. In support of the case in Money—and against the apprehension of many financial people of an early advance change—we have a Bank return of the most favorable nature, considering the season and its usual demands for Currency. The Deposits are up five millions, (about one-half, however, in Gold) and the line of Loans has been increased one and a half millions. The stock of Greenbacks is slightly better than last Monday, in Bank, and half a million larger in the Treasury Office. The Stock Exchange shows a little more life in the Railways, but the Bull and Bear accounts are about equally matched so far as successful speculation is concerned. The former had the advantage on the New-York Roads, while the latter mark lower figures for most of the Western lines. It is believed that in a few days New-York Central and Hudson River will be successfully consolidated, and the 80 ₱ cent. Scrip of the former capitalized, so that the future dealings of the Exchange will be in a single class of stock for both Roads, and based upon the par of the new or consolidated valuation. There are some signs that we have had the worst of the decline in part of the Western Railway traffic, and that for the remainder of the present season most of the lines will show a moderate increase on last year. The Lake Shore and Michigan Southern, and the Toledo and Wabash have steadily gained on the figures of last October, while Northwest and St. Paul were falling off, and the Illinois Central, in its general finances, will show better for the stockholders by half a million of dollars for the current fiscal year of the Company ending Dec. 31.

The weekly average of the Associated Local and National Banks in the Clearing House of this City for the week ending Saturday last, Oct. 30, compares as follows with the previous week, and with the corresponding week last year, to which we add the Specie and Currency balances in the New-York Office of the United States Treasury at these dates, respectively:

NEWS OF THE DAY.

EUROPE.

Italy reserves the right to set aside decisions of the Ecumenical Council not in accordance with the laws and the spirit of the age.

The Budget just submitted to the Spanish Cortes shows a deficit for the current year of [illegible] reals, but the estimates for the next fiscal year show a surplus in favor of the Treasury. The prospects of the Duke of GENOA as a candidate for the throne seem to improve in the Cortes, but the people are opposed to him, and the malcontents have petitioned for the election of MONTPENSIER. ISQUIERDA has resigned. General PRIM, in the Cortes, on Saturday, said that the Government hoped to suspend martial law, but the condition of the country would not permit it.

The reported illness of the French Emperor is now said to be not a relapse of the old complaint, but some rheumatic pains, which have disappeared. Rumors of Ministerial changes are again prevalent. The mission of General FLEURY to Russia, it is given out, has some connection with the mooted general disarmament.

Father HOMELE, elected Bishop of Rottenburg, but not yet confirmed, has been summoned to Rome by the Pope, it is supposed on account of his option at the Fulda Conference.

The operations against Dalmatian insurgents on the part of the Austrian Government have been interrupted by a heavy fall of snow.

The story of the loss at sea of the German emigrant ship Weser, with all on board, 946 persons, is a canard.

The Emperor of Russia, according to a St. Petersburg dispatch, will spend a portion of the coming Winter on the Isle of Wight and in Nice.

GENERAL.

The Secretary of the Argentine Legation, in Washington, has, under the authority of the Argentine Minister, furnished to the Press a protest against the statements recently put forth as those of General MCMAHON, to the effect that the cruelties of LOPEZ have not exceeded those of the Allies, which the Secretary characterizes as a "gratuitous calumny," and "offensive to the honor of the Argentine" of whose Commander-in-Chief he says he is "a close relative."

The statement of the public debt to be published to-day will show a further decrease of $[illegible] 75, and an aggregate of $[illegible] 45 since the 1st of March.

What is at Stake.

National issues are only indirectly involved in the contest which to-morrow will decide. The result will neither change the policy of the Administration, nor affect the relative power of parties in Congress. And yet, for national reasons, a Republican triumph is of more than trifling importance. The public credit will gain or lose by the verdict of New-York. The Government and the party that sustains it are pledged to redeem the national securities in gold; and a financial policy is in operation based upon this purpose, and calculated to give to the people great and lasting relief. A Democratic victory now may not materially retard the plans of the Treasury, but it will unquestionably furnish a pretext which the advocates of repudiation will not hesitate to use. The Empire State will be represented as an ally of the party whose distinctive principle is hostility to the public faith. The commercial Metropolis of the country will be paraded as the stronghold of repudiators, and the abettor of an agitation which tends to prolong financial uncertainty, and to aggravate commercial embarrassment. Can New-York afford to indorse Democracy and repudiation?

Again, the new Constitution awaits the people's judgment. It is not a faultless instrument, confessedly; it is defective on points where reforms are most needed. Compared with the present Constitution, however, it exhibits decided improvement. Its judiciary article not only introduces great amendments into the administration of justice, but provides for a future submission of the question of elective as distinguished from appointed judges. The changes provided for in regard to the Legislature are designed to secure greater purity in the Capitol and greater integrity and economy in the State Government. The abolition of the property qualification for colored men is another feature which commends the new Constitution to those who would bring the Government of the State into harmony with justice. On these grounds we might hope perhaps that the vote upon the Constitution will not be a strict party vote. But at least it should be understood that the opportunity is presented for obtaining important judicial reforms and for dealing justly with colored citizens; and these are objects worth striving for, apart from the general merits of the new Constitution.

The choice of a Legislature is, however, the matter most warmly contested, and that which most directly affects the future of this City and the State. Having a Democratic Governor, only a Democratic Senate is required to give him absolute control over appointments. What that means may be readily imagined by those who have seen his subserviency to Tammany, and know his responsibility for corrupt and shameless legislation last session.

But the Democrats are contending for more than the Senate; they seek the mastery of the Assembly also, and make no secret of the manner in which they propose to use Legislative power. A Democratic Legislature will sweep away Commissions and place the Government of this City in the hands of the Mayor and commonality. This is the real issue in the contest for Senators and Assemblymen. It is an issue which indicates a struggle between order and anarchy—between all that is beneficial in the present management of City affairs and the boundless fraud and rascality, the lawlessness and riot which would attend the unchecked sway of Tammany. Let the Democracy carry the Legislature, and this City will be at the mercy of the most corrupt and worthless City Government in Christendom.

The Supreme Court Judgeship.

The withdrawal of ERASTUS C. BENEDICT removes the only obstacle to the undivided support of Judge CERVEE by the Republican Party. There can now be no difficulty in uniting Republican votes with the votes of Democrats who are opposed to Tammany rascality; and the united strength should be sufficient to keep Judge BRADY where he is.

We have hoped that, prompted by self respect and an appreciation of the purposes of those who dictated his nomination, Judge BRADY would refuse to participate in the disgraceful scheme. Himself an upright and efficient Judge, there would seem to be only one course open for him. His name it is that lends the color of respectability to the movement set on foot by Judges BARNARD and CARDOZO; and we cannot suppose him ignorant of the object which his transfer from the Common Pleas is designed to serve. He must know that by taking the place of Judge CERVEE he will leave his present position at the mercy of a corrupt, unprincipled Ring, whose behests Governor HOFFMAN has shown a readiness to obey. The Supreme Court will not be improved by the substitution of BRADY for CERVEE, while the Common Pleas, deprived of BRADY's presence, will pass under the control of Tammany. And Judge BRADY, with his knowledge of all this, accepts the nomination under the plea of regard for party discipline!

With the contest narrowed down to BRADY and CERVEE, the duty of all who would arrest the degradation of the Judiciary and prevent the consummation of an infamous trick, is unmistakable. Against Judge BRADY, personally or professionally, nothing can be said. But as against BRADY, the tool of Tammany and a co-worker in a piece of partisan iniquity, the case is clear. His election to the Supreme Court would be a calamity and a disgrace which all who desire to preserve what remains of character and justice in the administration of law, should unite to defeat. The admitted purity of Judge CERVEE, and the confidence universally reposed in his discharge of his present duties, are considerations which should dispel all doubt. His reelection is called for, not simply as a tribute to integrity which has passed unscathed through a fiery ordeal, but as a rebuke to the insolence of Tammany, and a check to the corrupt conspiracy which derives from Tammany its vital force. A great outrage will be prevented, if the honest men of this City do their duty to-morrow.

The State Comptrollership.

The hostility of the Democracy to the nomination of Mr. GREELEY for the Comptrollership needs no explanation. His prominence in the Republican Party, his energy and effectiveness in party warfare, and the known purity of his personal character, are facts which sufficiently explain the persistent misrepresentation to which he is subjected by avowed opponents.

But the declared purpose of certain Republicans to except him from the ticket is neither intelligible nor just. We can understand the purpose as an expression of unrelenting malignity discreditable only to those who cherish it. But any attempt to separate Mr. GREELEY from his colleagues on public grounds is as unfair to the party as to Mr. GREELEY himself.

If any man in the party is entitled to the hearty support of Republicans, it is Mr. GREELEY. He has from the outset been more than one of its consistent and zealous members: he has helped to shape its policy, has contributed to the guidance of its councils, and has aided more than most men in promoting the principles which are the source of its triumphs. No difficulty has deterred him from the performance of duty as he has seen it; no temptation has turned him aside from the path on which his party had entered. He has worked vigorously, always. He has shared the toils of every battle in which the party has been engaged. His voice has been uniformly among the loudest in the advocacy of its cause—an advocacy which has been rendered all the more creditable by the sturdy independence which has sometimes characterized it, and by the unselfishness which has at all times been conspicuous in his conduct. To talk of such a man "running behind his ticket," is to insult the intelligence and to cast a slur upon the gratitude of Republicans.

It is not necessary for us to disclaim identification with some of Mr. GREELEY's opinions, or to say that on questions of policy we have been frequently constrained to differ with him. These differences have never implied an imputation upon the purity of his motives or the ardor of his devotion to the Republican Party. Though they had been much greater than they ever have been, we should still bear sincere and ungrudging testimony to the magnitude of the service which he has rendered the Republican Party, and the strength of his title to any reward which it may have at its disposal. No name could more properly occupy a conspicuous place on the ticket, and none should commend it better to the undivided and hearty support of the party.

We have no aversion to "scratching" when an objectionable candidate is concerned. But there can be none in Mr. GREELEY's case that does not proceed from reasons which have no relation to the principles or interests of the Republican organization. Such reasons are inadmissible in a canvass, and especially under the circumstances which attended Mr. GREELEY's nomination. He assumed his present position at the bidding of the State Committee. He had not intrigued for its honors, nor, on the other hand, did he shrink from its responsibilities. The party preferred a claim to his service, and he responded with an alacrity and a cordiality which should give him a fresh hold upon the confidence of Republicans. He is there as their champion, having no ends to serve but those which comport with the wishes of the party and the welfare of the public. If the courageous assertion of principle, and faithful, tireless service, and an honesty which even enemies have not questioned, constitute valid credentials, Mr. GREELEY's vote for the Comptrollership will show the full measure of Republican strength.

Registration Frauds—Tammany Playing its Old Game.

The proofs are conclusive that wholesale frauds have been committed upon the registry in various parts of the City; the Sixth, Fifteenth and Twenty-first Wards having been especially chosen as fields for the operations of repeaters. In each the registration is suspiciously large, and in the Twenty-first is greatly in excess of the vote cast for Governor in 1866. In the Sixth Ward the registration also exceeds the vote of last year, and the Eleventh Election District returns 1,003 votes, more than a third of which are undoubtedly illegal, as the district is small and contains few large tenement houses. But it is in the Fifteenth Ward, where the registration is only 50 less than the unprecedented vote of last year, that the frauds have been most unblushingly perpetrated. In the Third District 700 names have been registered, and the total honest vote is not more than 300. The same disgrace attaches to other districts in the ward. It is notorious that, during all of Saturday, gangs numbering from ten to twenty each were roaming from district to district, swearing to be inmates of houses which are known, in some cases, to be empty, and in others to have but two or three occupants. One house in Amity-street is thus credited with sixteen, and is legally entitled to three; another in the same street claims seven, and lawfully has none; houses in Bleecker, Wooster, Greene, and other streets of the ward have become suddenly densely populated with men, to the great astonishment of those most conversant with the neighborhoods, who never saw any of these men in or about the houses they now claim as domiciles.

These frauds were in many cases perpetrated with the knowledge of the Registers, and are in part the fruit of their timidity. It frequently happened that when a burly ruffian presented himself at the polling place, backed by a score or more of his fellows, the Registers surrendered to the mere presence of brute force, and the ruffian was registered without a question,—he and his fellows departed to repeat the fraud in another place. Some actually appeared twice at the same place, demanding to be registered by different names.

We are told that all this fraudulent registration is in the interest of candidates for local offices. Be this as it may, Tammany has determined that the election to-morrow shall be controlled by fraud. The officials charged with the receiving and counting the votes may, however, to a great extent, if not entirely, defeat that purpose. If they are honest and fearless, and if supported properly by the Republican challengers, they can, with the information which is accessible, to some extent restrain the frauds now contemplated.

The "World" and the Gold Ring.

The tactics which have been employed by a section of the Democrats during the pending contest will not be altogether forgotten by the public when the election is over. The weapons of detraction and slander have been intrusted to hands even more unscrupulous than those which are usually employed by the advocates of corruption and repudiation. The President has been exposed to shameless calumnies, but his accusers have discovered by past experience that he is not to be turned aside by malice and injustice from any course which he has once decided on following. They consequently determined, with characteristic elevation of character, to strike a blow at him through his wife. A letter was forged in her name, and a pretended extract from it was paraded, with great flourish, in the columns of the World. We instantly exposed the deception, and proved that the President's wife had written no such letter as that which was imputed to her. The Democratic Press, as a general rule, abstained from reprinting the spiteful fabrication. But the World had not the candor to admit that it was misled. Indeed, it probably was not misled. Upon the latter supposition, it is only consistent that it should have gone on quietly assuming that its invention is an indisputable fact.

It is not President GRANT who suffers by opposition of this kind. General WOODFORD put the case very clearly the other evening, at Brooklyn, when he said, "If the President had any connection with the speculations in gold and bonds, there would have been no need for such roundabout instrumentalities as his opponents have suggested. There was no need for all this complicated system of subterfuge and deceit." It would have been easy enough to bring home to him his complicity, without resorting to the dastardly expedient of putting his wife's name to a forged letter. It would be strange indeed if the World's line of conduct induced wavering voters to range themselves on the Democratic side. General GRANT broke up the gold conspiracy; but the World makes no attempt to deal with that irresistible evidence of his fidelity to the public interests.

We can scarcely complain that the misrepresentation to which the head of the Government is invariably exposed in the World falls also to our own lot. The gold conspiracy was denounced in these columns day after day, while it was being "winked at" by the World. The conspirators are well aware that in us they have found their most active and uncompromising foes. But the clique which forged a letter and ascribed it to a lady, who at least ought to be held sacred from the warfare of politics, had no compunction about inventing a statement that an article by one of the Gold Ring was inserted in the columns of THE TIMES. The World took up the congenial tale. The all-important fact that the article in question was so altered before publication as to render it fatal to the interests of the Gold Ring, and to constitute it damning testimony against them—this was completely ignored. Yet it is the one fact which reveals our true position in reference to the gold clique. No matter where the article came from, it was so revised, amended, and re-written as to be made a sharp sword in the side of the gold conspirators. The foremost of them has already admitted that—has admitted that the fraud which was intended to impose upon THE TIMES, was detected and frustrated by us. But the World designedly keeps that out of sight.

We imagined that the World might have been deceived by some member of the gold clique, who are naturally exasperated against us, and we gave it a straightforward explanation, on the hypothesis that it could perhaps now and then afford to be just. We were in error in expecting from it even accidental fair play, and we warn everybody else against falling into a similar mistake. We have never said that Mr. CORBIN wrote an article on the gold question, or any other question, for this paper. The World asserts that we did, in the full knowledge that we did not. It attributes letters to people which they never wrote, and ascribes to its contemporaries words which they never used. If it be said that this is only a temporary aberration, it is to be hoped that the World will soon return to its right mind—or, perhaps we should rather say, that its right mind will soon return to it.

Democratic Logic.

Some of the Democratic speakers in the present canvass have discovered certain wonderful macs' nests. Unable to deny that the present Administration reduced the national debt during the first seven months of its holding office by the enormous sum of $37,000,000; that it is still continuing to reduce the debt at the rate of nearly or quite $100,000,000 per annum; that at this rate the whole debt would be extinguished in fifteen years, while with a decrease of taxes by $50,000,000 per annum, it would be swept off in twenty-three years—unable, we say, to deny these facts, the Democratic orators are finding fault with the pleasant prospects thus opened to the country, and doing their best to cloud them.

We are told, for example, that a considerable part of the surplus revenue comes from the sale of war material by the Government. Well, suppose for a moment that it does. Is that any reason for ceasing to sell the old material? One of the best features of STANTON's administration of the War Bureau was the promptness with which he mustered out men and sold off material at the end of the rebellion, thus bringing down the war expenses with a run from three millions a day to less than a tenth of that sum. General GRANT, in succeeding him, pushed the same policy still further, as in turn did Secretaries SCHOFIELD and RAWLINS; and the same was true of the Navy. At that time, there was an outcry that we were going too fast in reduction—that we might need the material; but we have not needed it yet, and are not likely to for some time to come. Had we held on to the men and material, we should have lost both the expense of their keeping and the interest on the money received from sales of goods. We should have totally lost, besides, many of the goods themselves, which were perishable—such as commissary stores, clothing, medical stores, and the like; while of others we should have lost a great part of their value by better or cheaper articles of the same nature being introduced, in time, into the market.

To represent that this war material has been sold off, simply in order to produce a fictitious idea of economy, is absurd. It was sold, and is now selling, as the proper mode of getting rid of what will not pay the expense of storing on a mere possibility of future use. Moreover, the great bulk of these sales were effected under the last Administration, not under the present; and yet, with less current revenue from this source, the gain in general surplus income of GRANT's Administration has been remarkable.

The only real force in the argument is, that this source of income must one day cease. This is very true; but that day has not yet come, and when it does come, and we have no more war assets to help to defray the war expenses, there will be more than enough to balance the loss from this source in new ways. If we are asked in what ways, we will mention two in illustration.

In the first place, the surplus of last year (which was $48,000,000) was reduced by a payment of $18,000,000 on extra bounties, and one of $7,500,000 gold, (or, $9,500,000 currency,) for the purchase of Alaska. Here we have an amount of $27,500,000 in these two items alone, which we shall gain each year hereafter; and hence these must be added to our account of probable receipts and our surplus revenue for each succeeding fiscal year.

In the second place, the careful calculation by Mr. Commissioner WELLS shows that the average annual increase or elasticity in the revenue arising from the regular growth of the country, is fully $15,000,000. And, indeed, whoever notes the rapidity with which both North and South have recovered from the prostration of the war, the prospects of the crops, and the growth of population and "power to pay," will not account this an extravagant estimate.

Upon the whole, therefore, we do not feel alarmed at Democratic discoveries of the sources of our surplus revenues, or at their despairing auguries for the future. We weathered the war and arrived at honorable peace, when the Democratic policy was capitulation, and we shall weather the financial storms and come to prosperity, though the Democratic policy be repudiation.

To-night and to-morrow morning will be selected for the disclosure of "astounding facts" concerning various candidates to be voted for at the State election. These eleventh-hour revelations of hideous iniquity on the part of divers and sundry persons, always trap more or less of the unwary, especially those of an undecided turn of mind, who want something "definite" to guide them. In most cases, however, these tardy stories are mere baits for gudgeons, and we therefore advise all readers not to get unduly excited, and especially not to be misled by "circulars" tucked under their street doors to-night, or thrust into their hands at the polls to-morrow.

How many persons are knocked down by reckless drivers every week in this City alone! Not one-tenth of the cases get into the papers. The sufferers are carried home, and the relatives see "no use" in making their fate known to the public. On Friday evening a child, 7 years old, was killed by a horse and wagon. The driver looked calmly round at his work, whipped his horses, and escaped. When two stages are racing, the drivers would run over a whole family if they happened to stand in the way. The curious part of the affair is not their carelessness, but the impunity with which they are allowed to thin the population year after year. But then, no doubt, the immigration returns are heavy. "That makes all these odds even."

But a short time ago the Sierra Nevada, a vessel heavily laden with passengers and cargo, struck on a reef, and in a few minutes afterward she went down. Every soul on board was saved—first by the coolness of the Captain and good discipline of the crew, secondly by the proper supply of boats on board. Contrast this story with the loss of the Stonewall. In the latter vessel all was disorder and confusion when the moment of trial came. There were no boats. It is the same with too many of our river boats. While all goes well no one need fear. But when any serious danger arises the [illegible] lighter die. Is it too much to ask for more effectual supervision over these vessels?

LAFONTAINE tells an amusing story of a cobbler who got a hundred crowns from a benevolent banker, and was so worried with the care of it, that he ran back and returned it, for a quiet life. It is hardly to be expected that Mrs. General GAINES should follow the philosophy of that son of Crispin; but it must be a great annoyance to her, after a judgment has been rendered in her favor, to find that she must take further proceedings against those who would still deprive her of her rights. Lord WELLINGTON used to say that nothing could be more deplorable than a battle gained—except a battle lost; and many persons will be disposed to say something similar of a law-suit.

The fire of Friday morning in the Licking County Infirmary offers a deplorable commentary on the letter of Mr. BRACE, which we printed on Saturday, respecting the miserable treatment suffered by lunatics in those County Asylums. We are not sure that the ten poor creatures who perished in the conflagration lost their lives through the neglect of their keepers; but we cannot help suspecting that if the latter had only used an ordinary degree of care and precaution, they might have been able to get those unfortunate persons, or some of them, out of their cells in time to escape so horrible a fate. At any rate, we hope that, according to Dr. HOYT's plan, some judicious distribution of the insane will be put in force to redeem the State from the charge of neglecting so humane and important a duty.

A writer in the London Telegraph says he examined, a couple of years ago in the Doge's palace at Venice, a very old manuscript map of the globe on which he saw marked the two lakes of Nyanza, said to have been recently discovered by SPEKE and BAKER. That writer might also have remembered that the celebrated SANSON's map of the world, published in Paris in 1688, shows the same two lakes plainly represented and called the "Big and Little Nyanza." It is good to see all our adventurous discoverers handsomely praised by literary men and the rest of mankind; but it would seem that the ancient travelers and geographers knew a good deal of what the moderns make a merit of rediscovering.

"Murder will out" is a maxim which is not always sustained by facts, but there are probably few instances in which a murderer does not carry about with him "the worm that dieth not" in his own breast. The other day a man was hanged in England for killing his wife near twenty years before. He fought against the dread monitor within all those years, but at last it made the gallows more acceptable to him than life. So of ANTOINE MAURER, who murdered the poor tailor FURSTER, in Rockland County, last Spring. He had denied his guilt, but one morning when the jailor went into his cell he cried, "I heard a loud voice last night telling me that I must own up. I don't want to be left alone again till I tell somebody the truth." That "loud voice" is the criminal's worst punishment, and he cannot fly beyond its reach by denying that there is such a thing as conscience. In a state of society where even murderers sometimes are allowed to pass through the meshes of the law, the lesson taught by MAURER may have more weight with the criminal classes than the fear of judge and jury.

We should be sorry to cast ridicule upon those advocates of "woman's rights" who restrict their demands within bounds which all the world is disposed to respect. Let women have an equal chance with men in all callings or professions—let inequalities of the laws be redressed. But some of the female regenerators of society go to work in a very strange way if they really wish to exalt their sex. A correspondent of an evening contemporary met a missionary of this kind the other night. She had taken possession of his sleeping berth. He remonstrated with her, but she merely replied that she was not afraid to sleep in his room. Of course she never asked a question about his feelings in the matter. Presently the gentleman thought to frighten his unwelcome visitor. He began to throw off his clothes. The strong-minded one very naturally despised the artifice. She was "not afraid" of a man, no matter in what guise he presented himself. The owner of the stateroom laid himself down to sleep; the lovely woman did the same, having first "made herself ready." We confess that this is a truly alarming narrative. Woman is asserting her rights at a rate which promises to make some of us extremely uncomfortable. Where is it all to stop? The invader of the sleeping car, we are told, "bears a name which is perpetually appearing in the papers." She only carries her precepts into practice, poor thing. But really it is getting to be a very serious business for the inferior creature called man.

Many persons have been prophesying about electricity as a motor for machinery and vehicles; and these notions have been in a remarkable degree realized by the magnetic artifice which sets so many sewing machines going. And the advance is made by Professor GAUME of this City, who has invented a battery, with magnets and armature, which can work a force pump. These things are admirable as beginnings, and no doubt other discoveries in this line will follow, either here or in Europe. The contriving genius of our own people makes it almost certain that some combination of the electric power with machinery will bring a motor into general use strong enough to control and modify, not alone the coal mining and shipbuilding interests, but the whole industrial system. The industries are waking up and looking very revolutionary on all sides.

We don't see that Dr. VAN VLECK can effect so very much good by his exposure of the rogueries or dexterities of the DAVENPORTS, HUMES and other spiritualists. A great many persons like to have a faith in jugglery, and will be disposed, like the man HORACE speaks of, to complain that the doctor in curing them has removed their pleasant hallucinations. Besides, a great number of those who go to see the DAVENPORTS know the performances are only sleight-of-hand and trickery, and merely mean to admire things cleverly done. The jugglers and wonder-workers will have their crowded audiences for a good many years to come, very probably.

Apropos of the question of debt-reduction versus taxation, it has been stated that had Great Britain continued as highly taxed as it was twelve years ago, a good deal more than half of her larger debt would have been paid. Since 1858 the rate of British taxation has been reduced by an annual sum equal to $125,000,000 in gold. English economists maintain that it would have been unwise to employ such a sum for debt-reduction when a better use could be found for it. Admitting the assertion made that Great Britain was more lightly taxed twelve years ago than this country is now, it is instructive fact that the burdening lighter of national burdens does not appear to have sensibly impaired the condition of the great mass of the people. The increase of population has evidently outstripped the growth of internal resources—a condition of things which makes the maintenance of a permanent national burden a very questionable piece of policy. In our case the conditions are entirely reversed, and the unrestrained development of the material wealth of the country becomes as important a question as the speedy repayment of our obligations, and, indeed, furnishes the most potent aid towards such a result.

ALFRED of England, in presenting the young Mikado of Japan with a diamond snuff box, felt himself under the common sense necessity of telling the Asiatic that it was meant to hold imperial goodies—not snuff for the nose; which shows that the Prince was rather ashamed of that old European custom. The Mikado, who is now quite a big boy, having probably heard of the saying—originally ENRIQUE BURKE's—that a King of France should be frequently in the saddle, takes a good deal of horse exercise, and in other things falls in with the secular philosophy of the age—especially in the great work of general reform carried on by the Gorogio or Parliament of Japan.

People are at present inclined to think that, instead of being too retiring and sequestered, the Chinese have grown too forward and presuming. Our citizens have been making a sort of outcry on the Pacific seaboard, and wishing John Chinaman would stay in his own country; and now we perceive by the Shanghai News, that the Emperor of Austria thinks them too familiar by half. In their negotiations with the first Austrian envoy, Baron VON PETZ, they wished to give FRANCIS JOSEPH the title of their own emperor, Wang-te. But the HAPSBURGERS refuse that pagnim appellative, and the Chinese have politely given up the point, showing in this matter a great deal more good sense, to say nothing of etymological knowledge, than these German diplomatists.

Once more the old question comes up, How will the ex-soldiers vote? It is a question already answered this Fall in Ohio and Pennsylvania, and to-morrow it will be answered in New-York. General GARFIELD, in an eloquent speech delivered just before the Ohio election, said:

"I see around me old comrades in arms. Let me say to them, if one has doubts, if one has wavered for an hour, let me ask him to think one moment; let him take his old Springfield rifle, that he carried in so many a contest, and ask it how it voted. It will tell you that every shot from its muzzle went right against the rebellion and for the Union. Vote with your old, trusty gun, my boy, and you can't vote wrong."

We may repeat the counsel to the New-York soldiers who "fought with SIGEL"—let them "vote as they fought," and they "can't vote wrong."

AMUSEMENTS.

The Theatres To-night.

A change of programme will be made at Wallack's Theatre this evening, and Mr. TOM TAYLOR's comedy of "Still Waters Run Deep" will be acted there for the first time this season. At Niblo's, Miss LOTTA will commence a brief engagement. She will appear in "Little Nell," Mr. FELIX A. VINCENT, Mr. EDWARD COLEMAN and Miss KATE NEWTON filling the other characters in the play. At the Tammany, the HARLOW Brothers are to make their first appearance in many months. The Academy of Music is to be occupied by Mr. JAMES MAGE, Mr. JAMES TAYLOR, (an excellent comedian,) and a host of associates, who are to perform for the benefit of the Ladies' Aid Society of the German Hospital. Mr. MAGE is to appear in his station, and is also to contribute to the entertainment a violin solo. A full troupe of Bedouin Arabs will tenant the New-York Circus for the first time this evening. At other houses the attractions of the past week are maintained.

De Cordova's Lectures.

Mr. DE CORDOVA is to deliver at Steinway Hall, this evening, the last of his annual series of humorous lectures. The celebrated breach of promise case of "Whilm vs. Snim" is to occupy the attention of the lecturer, and to amuse, we are sure, the very large audience it is his good fortune always to address.

The Italian Opera Season.

Mr. MARETZEK's season begins next Wednesday night. "Il Trovatore" is named for the opening opera, and Mme. CAROLINA BRIGNOLI and Sig. C. LEFRANC make their respective debuts in Leonora and Manrico. Miss KELLOGG will shortly appear in one of the parts with which the New-York audience have identified her, and Mlle. CARLOTTA PATTI, as we announced some time ago, will sing in opera in the course of the season. We are informed that the demand for seats has been very brisk, and that there is substantial reason for anticipating a brilliant season. The chorus and orchestra are, it is said, to be very strong, and, as regards the merit of the principals, the confident assurances of those who ought to know, and who are most interested in the result, afford hopeful guarantees of artistic triumph and financial success.

OBITUARY.

William J. Peck.

Another of the representative men of this City, long and favorably known in business and political circles, is dead. WILLIAM J. PECK died at his residence, No. 348 West Fifty-second-street, in this City, yesterday (Sunday) morning, in the 45th year of his age. Born, reared and educated in this City, he was closely identified with the singular and remarkable growth and prosperity. He was possessed of peculiar talents, of untiring energy, of a genial and liberal disposition, great tact and shrewdness, of strict integrity and honor. Early in life he identified himself with Tammany Hall in politics. As a member of the Sixteenth Ward Executive Committee he was active, and when a delegate from that body to the General Committee he became so popular that at the division of that ward, and the formation of the Twentieth Ward, he was nominated and elected by his party as the first Alderman. His health becoming impaired, he declined to serve but one term, but accepted from the Board of Aldermen, in 1853, the appointment as one of the TAX Commissioners, which position he held until 1856. Again, in 1858, he was elected Alderman of the Twentieth Ward, and in 1859 he was chosen President of the Board of Aldermen. Since 1861 he has been but very little in public life, on account of the precarious state of his health. In his business career he has been as eminently successful as in his political. In connection with his brother and brother-in-law, A. GERNEY, he established the firm of PECK, GERNEY & CO., at the foot of Thirteenth-street, North River. He was twice married. His first wife was a daughter of SYLVANUS GERNEY, Esq., who died in 1861. Three years after he married his second, who survives him, with a family of four children.

City Social Science Society.

Several gentlemen have organized a Social Science Society, which will meet during the Winter every Monday evening at Plimpton Hall. A portion of the time on each evening is set apart to allow strangers an opportunity to take part in the discussion, and we understand that workingmen and women are particularly invited to attend, for much attention will be paid to labor questions. Mr. CHAS. MORAN delivers the opening address this evening.

Father Hyacinthe.

Père HYACINTHE had the satisfaction of spending a quiet Sabbath yesterday. No visits from persons desirous of knowing whether he prayed or not bored him from early morn until night. He arose at 5 A. M., dressed himself in the garments of an ordinary American gentleman, and went to early mass at the Catholic Church in West Twenty-third-street. After breakfast he accompanied Mr. DAMING to Rev. J. P. THOMPSON's Church, the Tabernacle, Sixth-avenue and West Thirty-fourth-street. In the evening he went out again, and did not return until 10 P. M., when he retired for the night.

In the City of Brooklyn there is to be an election for Mayor, Aldermen and Supervisors, which which will add to the number of boxes, but on the State, Senatorial and Assembly tickets, as well as the "Constitution," the ballots will be in accordance with the above.

The Nomination of Judge Clerke.

All the Republican organizations have united in nominating Judge CLERKE for Judge of the Supreme Court. This, in addition to the other indorsements that he has received, makes the nomination an exceedingly strong one.

Judge Clerke's Nomination.

It is really refreshing, in these times of political corruption, to have a candidate placed in nomination for the Supreme Court Judgeship, who has passed through the "fiery furnace" of political position, withstood unflinchingly every effort, put forth by wily politicians, to mould him in conformity with their ideas of party availability. THOMAS W. CLERKE comes before his fellow-citizens for their suffrage, stamped with the sign-manual of popular approbation, in consequence of his Roman firmness in refusing to be the political creature of a corrupt Ring. Let all citizens, who desire a pure and able dispensation of justice, cast their votes for THOMAS W. CLERKE, for Judge of Supreme Court. Pardon me for further encroaching on your space, by urging all natives of "sweet old Dublin" to unite in common with their fellow-citizens in honoring the Supreme Court Bench, by helping to place upon it one of Dublin's distinguished sons.

WILLIAM ABBOTT.

NEW-YORK, Saturday, Oct. 30, 1869.

I find in your Sunday issue a communication under the heading, "Mr. BERGEN'S Constituents Desire Information," propounding the following questions: What bill did he ever introduce? What measure did he ever advocate that should entitle him to the support of the working classes? I presume, Mr. Editor, these questions are fairly asked, with the expectation of a reply. I will answer them explicitly. I introduced a bill to repeal the Prison Labor-contracting law. I advocated a bill to give laboring men the right to establish societies in which such laws might be made as were best calculated to promote their interests. The passage of this bill would practically repeal the Conspiracy law. I worked before the Judiciary Committee to have said Committee report a bill to establish and define the relations of employers and appreciates, and I did what I could in my place in the House and before the Senate Committee to have repealed the Conspiracy law. I also introduced a series of resolutions calling for an investigation of State Prison management, with the view of exposing the disadvantages to the mechanic and the State of the present convict labor system. To my watchfulness and earnestness in promoting all matters in which the workingmen had an interest, I appeal alike to my record and the verdict of my associates of the Lower House. I am always ready to answer any proper questions, but to the impertinences of the latter half of STEWART, LACKEY & Co.'s letter, I have only this word: They certainly were never offered a dollar in my interest, and no matter how cheap the value of their services might be, I would not buy them if I could, believing, as I do, they would be dear at any price. But, in justification of myself, I feel called upon to say that I am a resident of the Ninth Ward from my boyhood to the present time. I hold at least within myself the consciousness that my bitterest enemy will not have the temerity, even at this time, to charge me as a private citizen with an unworthy act, and I challenge my public record for the proof of a dishonorable one.

Yours respectfully, WM. G. BERGEN.

POLITICAL NOTES.

A large meeting of German Americans, called by prominent German Democrats, was held in Albany on Friday night, at which resolutions were adopted pledging the support of the German Democracy to the brave General SIGEL.

SAMUEL T. MADDOX is the regularly-nominated Republican candidate for member of Assembly in the Seventh District of Kings County. His record as a member of the Assembly in 1862 was a creditable one, and if any good reason exists why an independent candidate should be run, it is unknown to us.

The Tammany Democrats are circulating a secret circular in Lewis and Jefferson Counties, urging the election of L. H. BROWN for Senator, claiming that if they can carry that district, the Eighteenth, they "can tie the hands of the Republicans in the Senate, and with Hon. ALLEN C. BEACH for President, they will be enabled to confirm any appointment made by the Governor." But it is too late. The Republicans of the district confidently expect to elect their candidate, NORRIS WINSLOW. A different result seemed possible until the Republicans of Jefferson County harmonized their differences and united in support of a single ticket for all the offices.

Honors to Commodore Vanderbilt.

The unveiling of the Vanderbilt bronze at the Hudson River Railroad Depot, St. John's Park, on Nov. 10, will be the occasion of an ovation to the distinguished financier such as is seldom offered to citizens who have attained honors and distinction wholly in the walks of private life. The enterprise, integrity and devotion to business which have characterized his career deserve the lasting commemoration that they are about to receive. Mr. VANDERBILT has been prominently before the public for half a century, and by the exercise of rare qualities of industry, perseverance and good judgment, has amassed a fortune and acquired an influence that few citizens, starting in life as he did, have ever attained. A single item of his enormous wealth is the $55,000,000 which he has invested in railroads in this country. His public spirit was evinced during the war, when he presented the Government with the steamship Vanderbilt, at a time when her services were greatly needed. He gave a loved son also to the country, who distinguished himself in the late war, and died in France from disease contracted in the field. Mr. VANDERBILT'S reputation as a good citizen and a business man of rare sagacity is world-wide, and cannot be added to by the coming demonstration; but as an evidence of the high estimation in which he is held by the friends of various walks in life who will unite in it, it cannot fail to be grateful to him.

Cotton and Sugar in Louisiana.

The rain must suspend cotton picking, but will be very welcome to the sugar planter, as in some places fears were beginning to be entertained for the seed cane. Grinding, too, was checked for want of water. Cotton picking has been pushed very vigorously throughout the State, planters giving it their undivided attention; and we may conclude that much less cotton remains in the fields than at the same time last year. What amount of damage, if any, the rain may have done to the cotton, yet unpicked, remains to be seen. Elsewhere can

A non-explosive lamp, filled with non-explosive oil and capped with a patent non-explosive burner, exploded in Cleveland, Ohio, on Friday night. A gentleman in the room suddenly noticed that "the lamp seemed to enlarge; he drew back a step or two, when the lamp exploded, sending a hundred pieces of glass flying through the room." It was standing on a bureau at the time, and was properly trimmed and in good order; yet with all these "non-explosives" it did explode.

Ex-President JOHNSON, the Nashville Union says, unhesitatingly declares that in his opinion the disfranchised portion of the population of Tennessee are a part of the people, and as such have a right to vote for delegates to the Constitutional Convention; that for a Legislature to "enact or a Convention to ordain otherwise would be to change our system of Government." He has used that phrase before.

As the Boston Transcript reminds us, Ex-Governor ANDREW, of Massachusetts, was a native of Windham, Cumberland County, Me.

A Boston clerk, who was sent to Des Moines, Iowa, by his employer to pay off $2,700 in notes held against them, concluded to take a trip to the Pacific. He did so, enjoyed it hugely, and then stricken with remorse went back to Des Moines with $900 left, and is now being escorted home by an officer of the law.

After four days had been consumed in the trial of Rev. C. C. TAFT, at Columbus, Ohio, on the charge of having a surpliced choir, the President of the Court announced that two gentlemen affirmed and two denied the jurisdiction, and that from a desire to favor as much as possible the defendant, he himself (the President) would give the casting vote against the jurisdiction.

The Bangor (Me.) Whig hears from private sources that, in an old barn in one of the country villages of New-Jersey, there is rotting away a very curious and valuable collection of books and autograph letters, formerly part of the library of the late MAHLON DICKERSON. Merely as a collection of choice autographs, the contents of this barn loft are of great value; but the rats have found out the treasure, and feed upon it undisturbed.

A New-Hampshire paper reports that JOSHUA KENNICK, residing in Ossipee, N. H., is "according to the best information," 140 years old. He has used tobacco from his youth up, but now thinks its effects are injurious, and that it will shorten his life many years.

In a speech in Boston on Thursday night, EDWARD M. CHAMBERLIN, the Labor Reform candidate for Governor, said that we should make our money simply and only counters for the exchange of commodities; and that the natural injustice of interest is tacitly acknowledged every day by men who lend money to their friends and refuse to receive anything for so doing.

General G. B. SHIELDS has consented to run as a candidate for Congress in the Third District of Texas, on the Hamilton ticket, saying that he will make the canvass as a Republican, standing on the Chicago platform and the Reconstruction acts of Congress, and in favor of immediate reconstruction, with the removal of disabilities of whatever character that may rest on any class of individuals by reason of their connection with the late war.

EX-GOVERNOR ANDREW.

Removal of His Remains to their Final Resting Place in Hingham, Mass.

From the Boston Traveler, Oct. 30.

The remains of Hon. JOHN A. ANDREW, the war Governor of Massachusetts, were this morning transferred from Mount Auburn to Hingham and deposited in the Hingham Cemetery. Previously to putting it into the hearse the coffin was opened and the body found to be in an excellent state of preservation, considering the length of time which has elapsed since its burial, the day being the second anniversary of the decease of Governor ANDREW. The cheeks had fallen in, and there was a change of hue, but still the face was recognizable.

A procession escorted the hearse from the line to the new North Church near the depot, a mile or more. All the business places in town were closed, and the galleries and side aisle pews of the church were thronged with the towns people. The escort consisted of the South Hingham Cornet Band, the Edward Humphrey Post, No. 104, of Hingham, Major B. F. Mecervey commanding, and the Lincoln Post, No. 40, of North Weymouth, Major F. Bicknell commanding. Colonel Hawkes Fearing, of Post No. 104, was the chief marshal. The Posts numbered about thirty men each.

The hearse was placed in the centre of the column, preceded by three flags, and the pall bearers were General L. Stevenson, Jr., General Cunningham, General J. W. Bates, B. F. Pratt, Colonel Henry Walker, Lieutenant-Colonel Porter and Captain C. C. Bumpus, marching beside the hearse. General Cogswell, of Salem, also a pall bearer, joined them at the church.

On arriving at the church, the hearse with the remains was allowed to stand in front of the door, it not being deemed proper to convey the remains into the building. The members of the profession took seats in the body pews, and the edifice was thus completely filled. Colonel JEFFRIES, of the Cadets, and two of the officers were present in the church, having marched behind the hearse as mourners. The pulpit was covered with flags, and on its front was a full-length picture of Governor ANDREW, and underneath these words, a quotation from the utterance of the distinguished dead:

"I know not what record of sin may await me in another world, but this I do know, that I never was mean enough to despise a man because he was poor, because he was ignorant, or because he was black."

The pulpit was occupied by the pastor, Rev. Mr. SNIDER, and by Rev. J. FREEMAN CLARKE, D. D. Among those in the church were Colonel LEE and Colonel W. W. CLAPP, of Boston, both of whom were on the military staff of Governor ANDREW, Lieutenant-Colonel HOLMES, the former commander of the Cadets, Colonel WARE, Hon. ALBERT FEARING, the town officer of Hingham, Major MORESBY, the Sergeant-at-Arms, and other gentlemen of note. The exercises commenced with an anthem from organ and choir, "The Lord is my Shepherd, I shall not want." Rev. Dr. CLARKE read some remarkably appropriate selections from Scripture, and then delivered a short address, followed by prayer.

ADDRESS OF DR. CLARKE.

Two years have passed, and, during all these two years, he has been missed and needed. In every great public emergency, I have said "If we only had JOHN ANDREW now!" Whenever a man of honesty, force and intelligence was wanted for any important station, we thought of him who was so admirably adapted to do well in all places of responsibility; and in our hours of private trial, in our perplexity, doubt and trouble, each one of us has—how often!—missed that friendship which was always ready, prompt, patient, wise and kind. JOHN ALBION ANDREW belonged to that class of men who, being dead, continue to speak; who do not leave us when they seem to go; and this was because he allied himself very early to principles of eternal truth and justice, and lived by them loyally to the end. And now, after these two years, during which his thought has been so present with us all, you have brought back his earthly remains to lay them in the midst of your houses. And in this you have done well. It seems more suitable than any way to have lived together should now sleep side by side; pleasant to each other as life, and

The Nomination of Judge Clerke.

All the Republican organizations have united in nominating Judge CLERKE for Judge of the Supreme Court. This, in addition to the other indorsements that he has received, makes the nomination an exceedingly strong one.

Judge Clerke's Nomination.

It is really refreshing, in these times of political corruption, to have a candidate placed in nomination for the Supreme Court Judgeship, who has passed through the "fiery furnace" of political position, withstood unflinchingly every effort, put forth by wily politicians, to mould him in conformity with their ideas of party availability. THOMAS W. CLERKE comes before his fellow-citizens for their suffrage, stamped with the sign-manual of popular approbation, in consequence of his Roman firmness in refusing to be the political creature of a corrupt Ring. Let all citizens, who desire a pure and able dispensation of justice, cast their votes for THOMAS W. CLERKE, for Judge of Supreme Court. Pardon me for further encroaching on your space, by urging all natives of "sweet old Dublin" to unite in common with their fellow-citizens in honoring the Supreme Court Bench, by helping to place upon it one of Dublin's distinguished sons.

WILLIAM ABBOTT.

NEW-YORK, Saturday, Oct. 30, 1869.

I find in your Sunday issue a communication under the heading, "Mr. BERGEN'S Constituents Desire Information," propounding the following questions: What bill did he ever introduce? What measure did he ever advocate that should entitle him to the support of the working classes? I presume, Mr. Editor, these questions are fairly asked, with the expectation of a reply. I will answer them explicitly. I introduced a bill to repeal the Prison Labor-contracting law. I advocated a bill to give laboring men the right to establish societies in which such laws might be made as were best calculated to promote their interests. The passage of this bill would practically repeal the Conspiracy law. I worked before the Judiciary Committee to have said Committee report a bill to establish and define the relations of employers and appreciates, and I did what I could in my place in the House and before the Senate Committee to have repealed the Conspiracy law. I also introduced a series of resolutions calling for an investigation of State Prison management, with the view of exposing the disadvantages to the mechanic and the State of the present convict labor system. To my watchfulness and earnestness in promoting all matters in which the workingmen had an interest, I appeal alike to my record and the verdict of my associates of the Lower House. I am always ready to answer any proper questions, but to the impertinences of the latter half of STEWART, LACKEY & Co.'s letter, I have only this word: They certainly were never offered a dollar in my interest, and no matter how cheap the value of their services might be, I would not buy them if I could, believing, as I do, they would be dear at any price. But, in justification of myself, I feel called up

REAL ESTATE TRANSACTIONS.

The sales for last week were quite large, and the results satisfactory as during any previous week. Several were made in New-Jersey, and one at Flatbush, L. I. The attendances were generally good, and despite the cold, unpleasant weather, the people were interested, remained out of doors patiently, listened to the auctioneer good-humoredly and bought quite promptly. The hot coffee and good lunches of course assisted considerably in bringing about these desirable results, but the people themselves must have been pretty good natured and anxious to buy to attend the sales at all. It is getting rather late in the season for suburban sales, and auctioneers are advising owners of such property to hold over until next Spring. The country does not just now look very inviting—the best property appears rather cold and dismal, the trees are being stripped of their foliage, the grass looks brown, and the birds and flowers, which make it a beautiful and attractive during the Summer months, are now missing. It is best, too, not to crowd the market now, lest it unfavorably affect the Spring sales. Owners will do well, therefore, to take the advice offered by men of experience, and offer no more property this Fall than is all ready and advertised. Good sales may be made, perhaps, for a week or ten days more; after that there is but little chance for them.

The sales for last week were as follows:

New-York improved property	$118,100
New-York unimproved property	65,570
Brooklyn improved property	70,750
Long Island unimproved property	2,640
New-Jersey unimproved property	113,014
New-Jersey improved property	59,750
Total for week	$429,824
Total from Oct. 1 to Oct. 23	268,472
Total for month of September	496,168
Total from Jan. 1 to August	26,965,453
Grand total	$27,276,875

A large proportion of this amount, it will be noticed, is for New-York and Brooklyn property.

The first country sale this week will be made by Messrs. JOHNSON & MILLER, at Astoria, L. I., on Wednesday, the 3d inst. The property consists of sixty valuable building lots, eligibly situated, only two blocks from the Hunter's Point and Astoria horse cars, five minutes' walk from the steamboat landing, and ten minutes' walk from the ferry to the foot of Ninety-second-street, New-York. It is located in the heart of the village, on high ground, and commands magnificent views of New-York City and the surrounding country. Handsome improvements are being erected on all sides of the property, and no part of the village is more thriving or desirable than this locality. Constant and rapid communication with the cities, beautiful views, good society, a healthy climate, and all the advantages of education and refinement, combine to render Astoria one of the most attractive places of residence on Long Island. The sale will take place in Trustees Hall, and will be made, rain or shine. Maps and particulars may be had at the auctioneer's office, No. 25 Nassau-street.

At the Exchange Salesroom several sales of improved and unimproved City property will be made.

To-day Mr. JOSEPH MCGUIRE has a partition sale by order of the Supreme Court, under direction of GRATZ NATHAN, referee, of the houses and lots Nos. 134 and 136 Spring-street, and No. 90 Wooster-street.

To-morrow Messrs. A. J. BLEECKER, SON & CO. will sell the following valuable Fifth Ward property: Lot No. 70 West Broadway, on west side, 50 feet north of Worth-street, size, 25 by 50; one lot, north side of Seventy-fifth-street, 175 feet east of Avenue A; two lots, southwest corner of Fourth-avenue and One Hundred and Fourteenth-street; one lot, east side of Avenue A, near Seventy-second-street; two lots, north side of Sixty-fourth-street, between Tenth and Eleventh avenues; one lot, south side of Ninety-ninth-street, between Madison and Fifth avenues; two lots, south side of One Hundred and Nineteenth-street, near Fourth-avenue; twenty-three lots, on One Hundred and Twenty-eighth and One Hundred and Twenty-ninth streets, between New and Tenth avenues; two lots, south side of One Hundred and Forty-fourth-street, between Seventh and Eighth avenues. The terms are liberal. Maps are now ready at the Auctioneer's Office, No. 77 Cedar-street.

On Thursday Messrs. E. H. LUDLOW & CO. have a large sale of Brooklyn and Flatbush property, by order of the Supreme Court.

How to Escape Hell—Lecture by Oliver Dyer.

A large audience assembled in the hall of the Cooper Institute last evening to listen to a lecture from OLIVER DYER, Esq., his subject being "Walk Swedenborg Teaches as the Way to Escape Hell." The speaker began by reading the whole of the twenty-third chapter of Matthew, part of the twenty-fifth chapter of the same book, and then read the parable of the Prodigal Son. He said that the subject was announced under the form in which it appeared, because that is the way it always presents itself to the human conscience, and it is always the first anxiety of the awakened conscience. The reason people are more solicitous about how to escape hell than how they can reach heaven is because they have a more decided notion about hell than we have about heaven. Orthodox Christians have no vague idea of hell, though they have foggy notions about heaven. Now, I say, with all kindness to every man's religion, that we have ideas that old churchmen have not, and they have some that we have got rid of. It is an admitted fact that people are more solicitous about hell than they are about heaven. Why is this? The reason is philosophical, and is because every human being has a clear conception of those things of which he has a human measure, so he can lay hold on with two-fold rules. The reason is because we have more of hell than of heaven in them. It is plain that man naturally gravitates for that he has the strongest affinity. A man goes to hell simply because he belongs there. In the eternal world they always have the right man in the right place. This business of going to heaven or hell is purely a philosophical matter, and there are no rewards or penalties in the case, but only logical sequences. The Divine nature is to be supremely just—that is, supremely logical, supremely philosophical. Man's nature is the reverse; hence the infinite difference between God's treatment of violators of his laws and man's treatment of violators of his laws. Man punishes in vengeance. A child gets punished because his father gets mad, not because he has done what is wrong. Man being near of kin to hell, and animated by its spirit, it is an easy and natural thing for him to ascribe the same vindictive manner to his Heavenly Father, and hence errors most pernicious have permeated theology. The Church does not teach us to keep the commandments, but teaches that Jesus has done everything, and there is nothing for us to do. The Church invents the doctrine of Trinity of Gods and doctrine of vicarious atonement. Those two doctrines are borrowed from the Pagans and are Pagan in their essence. Do you give medicine to one son to cure another? How are we to get rid of our unfitness for hell? for if we are fitted for it we go there, and that is all there is about it. The Lord says, "Keep the commandments." SWEDENBORG says, "The life of religion is doing good." You must forgive your debtors; on this pivots the whole thing turns. And again, when things go wrong at home, we must "love our neighbor as ourselves," which certainly ought to include our wife and children. The place for a man's religion is always at home, for there he is the same man. Keep out of "corners" in Wall-street. That is theft. You are robbing another. [Applause.] You commit theft again if you palm off a worthless thing on another. Act all the time as though God's eye was upon you. Mere glorifying God by singing hymns, and all this paraphernalia, is not worship at all. Let me wind up with an illustration: A lady has a bad servant, who spoils everything she attempts to cook and leaves the clothes line out in the rain, &c. She becomes converted and sings little poems in praise of her mistress, and tells every one what a fine person her mistress is, but goes on spoiling the food and burning the clothes, &c. Now, the mistress will say: "Stop this religion and bring in the clothes line out of the rain." To keep the Lord's commandments is the way to escape hell.

John-Street Methodist Church—Celebration of the One Hundred and Third Anniversary.

Yesterday the congregation of the John-street Methodist Episcopal Church celebrated the one hundred and third anniversary of its organization. At 9 A. M. a love feast was held, at which Rev. E. L. JAMES presided; at the regular morning service a sermon was preached by Rev. R. L. DASHIELL, D. D.; at 2 P. M. a reunion of all the old pastors and members of the church took place; at 6 P. M. a prayer meeting was held, and at the evening service a sermon was preached by Rev. BISHOP D. W. RAMZEE.

The present church edifice in John-street was dedicated by Bishop HEDDING in April, 1841. The first church building on this site was built in 1768, BARBARA HECK being the architect, the plan being revealed to her, as she believed, in answer to prayer. This edifice stood until May 31, 1817, when it was demolished and a larger one commenced in the following year, and this was replaced by the present one, which appears to be good for another hundred years to come. Since its organization the church has had 167 different pastors, commencing with PHILIP EMBURY and ending with the Rev. WM. P. CORBETT. Its present membership does not exceed 111.

Yesterday many of the old pastors and former members of the church were present, and many warm and cordial greetings were exchanged. Of those who formerly attended the church but had passed away and their places were filled by their children and grandchildren. At each service the edifice was crowded, and the discourses turned principally upon incidents connected with the establishment of the church, and concluded with prayers for its continued preservation.

The Family Relation—Sermon by Rev. Dr. Aikman.

Rev. WM. AIKMAN, D. D., pastor of the Presbyterian Church in Spring-street, near Varick, preached yesterday the first of a series of Sunday morning discourses on The Family. His topic was, "The Family Relation: Its Beauty and Blessedness." The text was from Psalms lxviii., 6: "God setteth the solitary in families."

Family duties, he said, were frequently inculcated in the Scriptures, and the precepts regarding them were brought to bear closely upon each member of the family. It was one of the evidences of God's goodness, which should call out the praises of men, that He "setteth the solitary in families," as though the intimation were that in the family are the choicest and most lasting blessings. The Family is not an accident, but rather an all-wise arrangement of the Great Creator, by which the well being of man is to be promoted. All, indeed, of the Divine appointments have a tendency to develop man to the highest point as an intellectual and moral being; but this relation, above all others, is intended to produce such a result. The reverend gentleman alluded to the growing frequency of infanticide and feticide, which he condemned with earnestness as being in every way horrible. To be a mother is not now, by very many, esteemed a privilege and a blessing for which God should be thanked and praised, but was rather looked upon as a calamity to be deprecated. Thousands of American homes are wilfully and willingly unblest of children, and many a young wife lives with shattered health, undermined by her own act, and many have sunk and are sinking to premature graves, because they seek to wickedly avoid what the Creator has made to every right-minded woman the highest and choicest good—children to rise up and call her blessed. The infamous crime to which he alluded was, he said, a growing vice and a crying shame. If the secret history of many a home were told, the gentle-sounding words, "Providence" and "bereavement" would be stricken out, and the sterner one, child murder and suicide would take their places. The Christian family was then pictured, and its attractiveness and blessedness set forth in glowing phrase.

The Ecumenical Council—Sermon by Rev. J. McNaughton.

The pastor of the Eighth-street Presbyterian Church, Rev. JOHN MCNAUGHTON, preached last evening from the text: "Seek and ye shall find, knock and it shall be opened unto you." Matthew vii, 7. He spoke at considerable length on the objects and results of Christianity, liberty of thought and progressive religious views, and then alluded to the forthcoming Ecumenical Council: Romanism is strangling every element of freedom. Protestantism has given to the world a promise of a better day coming. Will Rome shut her eyes at the coming Ecumenical Council to the fact that 200 years have laid at her feet, or will she take a lesson and rise out of her sleep of death? This will be her last opportunity, and if she does not adapt herself to the time, the meteorous wheels of the modern period will pass over her. No efforts of her council can hinder the age from doing its work, and the sin will be visited heavily on their heads if they place the crest in antagonism with the progress of liberty. We love the old Church in spite of all her sins, for what she gave us. As Protestants we cannot but be faithful to her, for from her heads we get liberty and glorious civilization, and all that makes the world beautiful and glorious. She has given to us the instrument that is now filled against herself. Let her set aside her traditions, advance with modern progress, and the world will give her the honor to which she is entitled. It is a debt she owes to manhood and to God. Now is the opportunity to retrieve the past, and place herself in the foremost ranks as a religious community. There has not been and there never will be a greater force laid before the eyes of the intelligent people of this nineteenth century, than the Ecumenical Council of the Pope proclaims, and is allowed, the right to do the thinking of the greatest part of the Christian world. It will be an insult to the assembled delegates to tolerate such a council, for he should not be allowed to dictate to men as in Father HYACINTHE's case. In this age of speculation every man had a right to his own thoughts and should not be restrained by councils which have never done the world good, but evil. And it is doubtful, from indications great, that the present one will be an exception. If the Pope persists in ignoring enlightened rights, it will be rebellious and humiliation on the Church, for it is dangerous in this age lest men should have such a [illegible] YACHTS [illegible] more than [illegible] enlight. And if the Pope did not use [illegible] for the good of his fellow creatures [illegible] name would sink into oblivion. Let no [illegible] that a new day is coming, that tyranny is [illegible] away, and the impulse that has been [illegible] Christianity since the Reformation is [illegible] first indication of a mighty movement to separate society from the foundation. If the Council can do anything, let us hope it will become the means of fortifying the old Church, and be in keeping with the advancing spirit of the age.

Evangelical Education—Addresses by Rev. Drs. Vinton and Smith and Right Rev. Dr. Cummings.

A meeting was held last evening at the Church of the Incarnation, in the interest of the Evangelical Education Society. Dr. JOHN COTTON SMITH gave an account of the origin and objects of the Society. It was intended, he said, to train ministers for the work of preaching the Gospel in its purity and simplicity. It stood in the place of affluent parents to the indigent students, and called upon the Church to supply it with means. It was now $10,000 in debt, and contributions were solicited to relieve it from this [illegible].

Dr. ALEXANDER H. VINTON, rector of St. Luke's Church, made an appeal in behalf of the Society. Education, he said, was the characteristic of the age, but there was a tendency to diverge from the Gospel of Christ. Men were setting up the deductions of their own reason against the eternal truths of God's revelation. We need strong men to contend with the tide of infidelity and rationalism which beats incessantly against the bulwarks of Christ's kingdom; men who are furnished with all the armor of theological warfare as well as with the spirit of God in its power. The object of this Society was to train men for this great contest with the powers of darkness, and deserved the encouragement of the Church.

Right Rev. Dr. CUMMINGS, Bishop of Kentucky, was introduced and spoke at some length on the objects of the Society. He said it was founded on three great principles. First, it undertook to educate only men who are called of God to preach His word. In the second place, the men trained by this Society were to be ambassadors of Christ, and not priests. Lastly, ministers were needed who are up to the spirit of the age—men who can grapple with the great problems of the day. Preachers should have a sympathy with the needs of society, and be fitted to do their part to supply those needs.

The Inspiration to Work—A Sermon by Rev. O. B. Frothingham.

Rev. O. B. FROTHINGHAM delivered a very interesting discourse yesterday morning at Lyric Hall, on "The Inspiration to Work." Two subjects of great interest, he said, had occupied his thoughts during the past week—the visit to this City of Father HYACINTHE, and the meeting for the advancement of social science. The famous priest had been followed about by a curious throng, and besieged in his very room—not that people expected to hear him speak, or to hold any conversation with him, but from idle curiosity. On the other hand, at the meeting in the rooms of the Historical Society, subjects of the deepest interest and of vital importance to the welfare of the community, had been discussed by able thinkers to a few dozen auditors. This exhibited a surprising degree of indifference in the community to the evils which were undermining society, and eating out the heart of our political and social institutions. Like a victim to the insidious ravages of consumption, society refused to acknowledge the existence of the terrible malady which is sapping its constitution, and shuts its ears to the thoughtful physician who would warn it to seek the life-giving remedies. If a Redeemer comes and takes up the thankless office of proving the people the iniquity of their ways, they fasten him to a cross. There were two important causes of this extraordinary indifference and blindness besides the ignorance, frivolity and selfseeking so common with all classes. The first of these was the overweening faith in Providence; the second was the complacency with which we compare the present with the past.

Love and Happy Homes—Sermon by Rev. T. T. Kendrick.

A sermon on this subject was delivered last evening by Rev. T. T. KENDRICK, at the Church of the Pilgrims, West Forty-eighth-street. The text was taken from Romans xiii., 10: "Love is the fulfilling of the law." The speaker said that the material, the intellectual and the moral worlds presented many grand themes for discourse, but that there is one that transcends every other, and that is love. This subject is grander than any that science can present; the holy angels of God look upon it with delight, but can never fathom it depths. All passions, affections and mental gifts are his servitors. All men at some time or other are subject to its influence, and, like other maladies, it is frequently all the worse for coming late in life; the symptoms by which its presence is detected are absence of mind, carelessness about dress, and, finally, a general dissatisfaction with life unless the loved one can be possessed. Nature intended that we should not only live in communities, but also in families, and thence comes the word home, around which are gathered all the holiest associations of life. Like love, it has survived the Fall, and retains some of its pristine glory. One of the great evils of modern society is that the sacred privacy of home is destroyed by the fashion of living at hotels and boarding houses. People who are in such a case know nothing of the sweets of domestic life. In order that a home may be happy, it is necessary that love should dwell there. Without this, all is barren. In the family, at least, "love is the fulfilling of the law."

The Protestant Reformation—Sermon by Rev. Dr. Krotel.

Rev. Dr. KROTEL, pastor of the Evangelical Lutheran Church of the Holy Trinity, in Twenty-first-street, preached on the above subject yesterday morning, taking for his text the words of St. Paul: "Prove all things; hold fast that which is good." The glorious right restored to us by the Reformation, he said, was expressed in the text. This was the grand shibboleth and watchword of the Reformation, and should be inscribed over the portals of every Protestant Church. It was an inscription that never could be placed over the doors of a Catholic Church. No Pope or Cardinal or Bishop of that Church would permit it, for it would give the lie to their whole theory and practice of religion. These words of the Apostle were not addressed to Bishops and clergymen alone, but to the entire Church and every member thereof. The same principle of free individual judgment was taught by Christ himself. This glorious right being thus restored to us by the Reformation, there is imposed upon us a corresponding duty to exercise the right to "search the Scriptures," to "prove all things, and hold fast that which is good."

Simpson Mission School—Addresses by Horace Greeley and Others.

The exercises of the Simpson Mission Sabbath School were unusually interesting yesterday afternoon, owing to addresses delivered on the occasion by HORACE GREELEY, Rev. Mr. WILLIS and Rev. Mr. TAYLOR. The Mission met at the Public School building in Houston-street, near Essex, and besides the scholars, was attended by many ladies and gentlemen. Mr. GREELEY made the principal address of the afternoon, taking for his text the words, "The fool hath said in his heart there is no God." He wished to impress upon the children the truth that there is a God who created the universe, and who rewards men hereafter according to their conduct in this life. He believed that no man in his inner conscience could agree with the words of the fool in the text. Mr. GREELEY then branched off to his favorite subject of temperance, which he considers to be at the root of a great part of the misery and wickedness in society. He warned the children of the school never to allow themselves to touch the alcoholic poison. He attributed his strength and vigor in his late years to his total abstinence principles.

Mr. WILLIS made a warm address on the power and influence of Sabbath Schools.

Other brief addresses were made, and several hymns were sung by the children. The Mission meets every Sunday afternoon at 3:30 o'clock.

The Omnipresent God—Sermon by Rev. George H. Hepworth.

Rev. GEORGE H. HEPWORTH, Pastor of the Church of the Messiah, corner of Thirty-fourth-street and Park-avenue, preached yesterday morning, the subject being the difference of views as to the character of God held by the old theological sects and the adherents of the Unitarian faith. He selected as his text Revelations vii, 15: "I will be his God, and he shall be my Son." The God of the Puritan, alike with the God of Calvin, of the Catholic and of Cowper, was invested with a character of barbarity. They represented the Deity as simply a vast and mighty human being with human passions—a great deal sitting and watching human beings to pay them for their good acts and punish them for the bad. Compare the barbarous notions with the idea given of God by Christ in the New Testament. The one bright as heaven, the other gloomy as hell. He drew illustrations of the conduct of a man in life moved only by the motive of fear or hope of reward inculcated by the old theology.

The Church of the Reformation an Old Church Restored, Not a New One Created.

Last evening Rev. Dr. SEYMOUR preached on the theme at the Church of the Ascension, in Fourteenth-street. He said that the English Church dated its organization and existence from the time of the Apostles. Christ had said that His Church should endure forever. From the very darkest times the Church of England existed. The Pope had had a King the Church was organized and represented, and no one knew when then it is now. It had not been changed by the Reformation. It had only been renewed. The man, he said, who called himself a Catholic, a saint, is guilty, is unless he might found, but not a Church. From Christ came the organization of the Church of England, and our Church here was an integral part of it. Its influence and power were extending, and he prayed that they might continue to do so.

The Blind Preacher—Sermon by Rev. W. H. Milburn in Behalf of the Sailors.

Rev. W. H. MILBURN, the well-known blind preacher, who has recently returned to this country from Europe, delivered a sermon yesterday morning in the Chapel of the Holy Saviour, Twenty-fifth-street, in behalf of the Protestant Episcopal Church Missionary Society for Seamen. His discourse, taken from the text Romans, i., 14-17, "I am debtor both to the Greeks and to the barbarians; both to the wise and to the unwise," &c., was a brief and eloquent acknowledgment of the benefit mankind has received from former generations, and the debt we owe to our fellow-creatures in every part of the world, whose various labors contribute to the general sum of human happiness.

The Fifth Commandment—Sermon by Rev. Dr. Scott.

Rev. Dr. SCOTT, pastor of the West Forty-second-street Presbyterian Church, preached a sermon on the Fifth Commandment last evening. He said no of course was there any offences which common or statute law did not take cognizance of, but which might be regarded as violations of the divine law, and that among them was disobedience to parents. The Creator had expressly commanded love and respect and honor to parents. Where that homage was wanting there was also to be found a lack of true piety. A bad son was generally a bad citizen.
